House Chiefs Of 2 Parties Pursue Tax Compromise

Doughton-Dewey Suggestion Placed High on List of Pay-as-Go Schemes

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

House tax leaders of both parties buried the hatchet yesterday and worked into the night in an effort to find a compromise tax forgiveness and pay-as-you-earn plan that could be put through the lower chamber and sent to the Senate before Easter, possibly by Wednesday.

Apparently high on the list of "dark horse" plans that might be offered to the House was one jointly authored by Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina and a committee member, Representative Dewey (Republican) of Illinois and indorsed earlier in principle by rank and file members of both parties.

The plan's provisions:

First, inaugurating of pay-as-you-earn taxation with a clear-cut promise from Congress that for the next three years Federal income tax rates for individuals would be frozen at their present levels.

Second, it would treat taxes paid this year as settlement of liability on this year's income and start collections July 1 by withholding at the source on salaries and wages.

On Lower 1941 Rates

Third, the individual would be called upon to measure his tax on 1942 income by the old lower rates and more favorable exemptions of 1941, and pay that amount over the next three years during the period of the rate freeze, in addition to paying current taxes at 1942 rates.

The compromise feature of freezing rates was suggested by Representative Dewey as an addition to the partial abatement proposal of taxing 1942 income at 1941 rates offered by Chairman Doughton shortly after pay-as-you-go hearings started in early February.

It was discussed, along with a variety of other compromise proposals, in an extraordinary night session, attended by Doughton, Dewey, and five ranking Ways and Means members. The same group will confer again today, and possibly tomorrow, in an effort to agree on pay-as-you-earn legislation. If an agreement is found, the plan will go to the full Ways and Means Committee and then to the House. Senate leaders have made clear any tax plan would get quick attention there.

Outpouring of $11,308 Boosts War Plane Fund to $42,260

Burgess Meredith Entertains 300 Key Drive Workers

Three hundred key workers and members of the Council of Personnel active in the GOVERNMENT GIRL warplane drive were entertained last night in the Victory Room of the Roosevelt Hotel by Lieut. Burgess Meredith of the Army Air Corps in an informal pep rally.

Lieutenant Meredith, who entered the service a year ago as a private, kept the workers in a good humor with his stories and songs.

Miss Alice Ricardi, an employe of the Veterans Administration who is credited with writing the letter suggesting the drive for the GOVERNMENT GIRL, was introduced to the audience by Jerry Kluttz, author of The Federal Diary.

Brief, informal talks were made by campaign leaders from the various Government agencies. At intervals the assembly was entertained by the Dawson Sisters trio and Tony Pastor's band.

Miss Eleanore Leech of the Council of Personnel was introduced.

Speakers introduced by Lucille Foster McMillin of the Civil Service commission, who was master of ceremonies, were:

Commerce Department At $2214 Is Day's High Contributor

The Government Girl warplane fund stood at $42,260 last night, hoisted there by the largest outpouring of dollars since the collection of money began.

Yesterday's contributions totaled $11,308, almost $3500 more than the previous high, Wednesday's $7835. The fact that yesterday was pay day no doubt had something to do with the enthusiasm which Uncle's nephews and nieces are displaying in making an outright gift of a warplane to the fighting forces.

Yesterday's heaviest contributor was the Department of Commerce with $2214. In second place was the Office of Price Administration with $1901; third was the Navy Department, $1789, and the Treasury Department was fourth with $1284.

Tangible evidence yesterday proved that smaller Federal agencies as well as larger ones had generated heartening enthusiasm in the GOVERNMENT GIRL contest.

The State Department's Exports and Requirements division has announced 100 per cent contributions, according to Miss Madge Lazo, Personnel Relations section, who is in charge of the department campaign.

President's Power to Cut Dollar Killed

Treasury Currency Stabilization Fund Extended Two Years

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation authority was buried in the Senate yesterday—at least for the life of the present Congress and effective next June 30.

The death warrant for the power under which Mr. Roosevelt created the so-called 59-cent dollar more than nine years ago was written in exactly eight minutes as the Senate unanimously approved legislation extending for another two years the life of the Treasury's two billion dollar currency stabilization fund.

As it was introduced, the bill contained a provision for two-year continuation of authority to devalue the dollar to a low of 50 cents. As it went to the House, this section was deleted and the power killed by a promise of Democratic leaders to the Republican minority that no new request for renewal of the authority will be made during the life of the Congress or "until the end of this war."

Risk To Bond Drive

Action came about 2 hours after the abbreviated bill was reported to the Senate by Chairman Wagner of the Banking Committee and on the same day that Treasury Secretary Morgenthau found his plea for renewed dollar devaluation power balked by the argument of a majority of the committee that perpetuation of the authority would injure the Treasury's current 13-billion-dollar war bond drive.

"You are asking the American people to buy 13 billion dollars worth of bonds, and you are asking us to give the President the power to devalue those bonds," was the way the argument was framed by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio during his examination of Morgenthau at a committee hear-

House Votes 100 Millions as Crop Incentive

Sum 'Concealed' In Big Supply Bill For AAA Programs

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

With an eye to the farm vote, the House yesterday approved approximately 100 million dollars for incentive payments to farmers who raise special 1943 war crops—voting 121 to 81 for the idea after members had consumed most of the afternoon proclaiming their opposition to "subsidies."

The sum was "concealed" in a section of the Department of Agriculture's supply bill asking 300 million dollars for AAA programs and soil-building practices, and had been approved by the appropriations subcommittee which last month roundly criticized Secretary of Agriculture Wickard for conceiving such a plan.

Representative Dirksen (Republican of Illinois explained committee members "thought we would be generous and taper off, but really come to grips with the question next year."

Taber Plan Voted Down

He said about 100 million dollars would be left over for subsidy use after the 178 million dollars had been spent for soil building and administrative purposes. Since the word "incentive" was not contained in the bill, the House upheld the Secretary's contention that he had authority to make the payments under AAA laws already in existence.

"I was surprised at the Secretary's interpretation," Dirksen declared, "but the House will have to forbid the incentive payments if it doesn't want them."

Representative Taber (Republican) of New York sought to cut the 300 million dollars one-third so no funds would be left for subsidies, but his amendment was voted down.

Action on the total $707,040,844 agriculture bill will be completed today, when the future of the Farm Security Administration and parity payments to farmers, and Federal Crop Insurance program will be decided.

The House is expected to act Monday on a $54,789,434 appropriations bill to finance the District government through the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

The bill, as reported out yesterday by the District of Columbia subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, has reduced by $220,264 the amount recommended by the Commissioners in the budget submitted in January, and is $1,516,597 less than the amount appropriated to run the Municipal Government in the year which ends June 30.

Despite recent pay raises, the appropriations hearing revealed, no increase in real estate taxes are likely in the new fiscal year, because of the sound condition of the District treasury.

Important provisions of the bill the House will study are:

Worker Expected No Pay for Serving U. S. in Shipyard

Representative Hagen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, told the story of one American's unquestioning faith in his country yesterday—an "Okie" shipyard worker who failed to cash his pay checks for nine months because he believed he was expected to work for nothing in wartime.

The tale of the unnamed workman and his wife, neither able to read or write, was recited to Hagen in a letter from Mrs. Ethel W. McCart of San Leandro, Calif. It recounted how the couple went to California to help in the war effort, the husband finding a job in Kaiser shipyard No. 3 at Richmond, the wife taking work as a waitress to support him. When she lost her job the story came out.

The man's foreman learned, wrote Mrs. McCart, that:

"The man didn't know he was being paid anything for what he was doing. He was working for the pure love of his country."

Not knowing what they were, he had saved all his checks—something over nine months at wages from 95 cents an hour to $1 plus.

R.A.F. Roars Across Channel on Return Of U.S. Bombers From Lorient-Brest Raid

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), April 17.—American heavy bombers pounded Axis U-boat bases and harbor installations at Lorient and Brest by daylight yesterday, and the steady round-the-clock Allied bombardment of strategic targets continued early today with another R. A. F. thrust across the Channel.

By moonlight British heavy bombers took off for the Continent last night after their American comrades had completed their smashes.

For a full hour the roar of the British planes could be heard crossing into Europe and Axis radio stations abruptly went off the air.

Four of the big American bombers and two of their Spitfire fighter escorts failed to return from yesterday's strike against the Axis-held French ports.

[London went under an air alert last night, the second raid alarm for the British capital in less than 12 hours. Two enemy planes which were seen dashing inland caused an alarm yesterday afternoon but they never reached the city.]

The latest powerful offensive, aimed at the enemy's railway lines, trains, shipping, dockyards, planes and air fields, was continued yesterday with fighter-escorted Ventura bombers attacking industrial targets in Ostend, Belgium, destroying four enemy fighters in combat. One R. A. F. fighter was missing.

The crippling assault on enemy targets began Thursday night when one of the R. A. F.'s biggest forces of fighters swarmed across the moonlit Channel to smash at Germany's rail and highway communications over a 600-mile front in western Germany, Belgium and northern France.

All the attacking planes returned safely to testify to the inadequacy of Nazi aerial defenses, but before their wheels touched down, day raiders had headed out to spread new destruction. Among yesterday's targets was Tricqueville Airfield in France. Two 900-ton minesweepers in Le Havre Harbor were fired and oil storage tanks shot up.

The Air Ministry described Thursday night's operations as one of the R. A. F. fighter command's biggest night offensives. Speedy

Army Bombers Down 558 Planes Of Foe to Date

Bomber planes of six Army Air Forces bombardment groups have shot down 558 Axis planes during the months they have been carrying out successful missions of destruction against enemy land and sea targets, the War Department announced last night.

In disclosing this sizeable toll taken by the gunners of American bomber planes in the Southwest Pacific and European theaters, the Army said that most of the time they were operating without fighter escort.

"The ratio of planes shot down by these groups compared to those lost by them in aerial combat has been overwhelmingly favorable to the Army Air Forces," it was said.

"Fighter opposition and the heaviest concentration of antiaircraft have failed to keep them from their targets.

The bombardment groups cited are the 90th, 43d, 91st, 22d, 306th and 303d.

Allied Hearquarters in North Africa, April 16.—Infantry units of Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's British First Army, holding the 10 strategic hills they captured in the Medjez-El-Bab sector in less than a week, hurled back savage German counterattacks today and improved their positions on those heights overlooking Tunis and Bizerte.

Supported by artillery, the infantry has pushed steadily eastward in the area north of Medjez-El-Bab and now holds Djebelang, a 2000-foot peak from which both the capital and the naval base to the north can be seen on clear days.

British and American artillery now command the vital Tebourba road and, even more important, can shell the bloody Djebel El Ahmera (longstop hill), about 5 miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab, which overlooks the pass from the village into the plain of Tunis itself.

[The Germans have begun to evacuate their forces from Tunisia, the Moscow radio said tonight, quoting "reliable reports" from Sweden, the International News Service reported yesterday.

The broadcast was reported heard by C. B. S.

"Aircraft is being used for the evacuation," Moscow said, adding that "The Germans are leaving the Italians to fight the main battle."]

While the First Army was locked in bitter struggle against Axis mountain troops, there was only patrol activity along the Enfidaville line to the south where the swift, mechanized warfare that characteriezd the British and American advance north from Gabes has come to a halt pending further preparation.

There Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery was reported massing strength for another northward thrust to couple with Anderson's flanking movement.

3 Forces on Duty In Atlantic Waters And 4 in Pacific, Secretary Reveals

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Knox disclosed yesterday that the United States Navy now has seven fleets in existence operating against the enemy.

He told reporters that additional fighting units had been created under "several" reorganizations of the expanding Navy put into effect since the start of the war. Prior to Pearl Harbor the Navy was composed of three fleets—Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic.

Exact identification of the seven fleets and the areas in which they operate was withheld by Knox, who said, however, that there is not one for each ocean of the seven seas. Several are in the Pacific, he added.

The Navy chief revealed the existence of the seven fleets in announcing the assignments of four officers just appointed to the new grade of commodore. Two of them were given command of units under the "Third Fleet, South Pacific" and the "Seventh Fleet, Southwest Pacific," respectively.

These are two of the seven fleets, Knox stated.

Probable Lineup

Previously, the Navy had revealed the existence of seven separate and more or less independent commands, all, of course, under the United States fleet commander in chief, Admiral Ernest J. King. From these announcements, it would appear probable that the Navy's fleets are set up as follows:

ATLANTIC FLEET—covering the North Atlantic—with Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll in command.

EUROPEAN FLEET, under Admiral Harold R. Stark. The Navy previously had identified Stark as "commander, U. S. Naval Forces in Europe."

SOUTH ATLANTIC FLEET, commanded by Vice Admiral Jonas H. Ingram.

PACIFIC FLEET, commanded by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

SOUTH PACIFIC FLEET, (Third Fleet), commanded by Admiral William F. Halsey, jr.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC FLEET, (Seventh Fleet), commanded by Vice Admiral Arthur Carpender.

The Pacific Fleet is believed to include units operating in the Pearl Harbor-Midway area as well as the North Pacific.

Previously, the Third Fleet, South Pacific, was designated as the South Pacific force and was a part of the Pacific Fleet. Existence

Japs Digging In Despite 8 More Raids on Kiska

New Blasts Make Total 28 in 4 Days; Resistance Stiffer

By John Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

Eight new air attacks against Japanese forces on Kiska Island were reported by the Navy yesterday, but information direct from the North Pacific battle front indicated that the enemy had gone into the current phase of fighting stronger than ever.

A Navy communique reported that Army Liberator heavy bombers and Mitchell medium bombers with Lightning and Warhawk fighters carried out the attacks Wednesday.

These eight attacks were the latest of a series of heavy actions which began only four days ago when the Aleutians air command sent its fleet of death-dealing planes over Kiska for four raids.

The following day the raids were stepped up to six and the next day, Tuesday, to 10. These together with Wednesday's eight made the total for the four-day period 28 raids.

Japs Doggedly Persisting

Despite such sustained attack, however, it appeared that the Japanese were doggedly persisting in their plan to develop Kiska as an air base. The mention of revetments to protect planes in the last communique was the first evidence given out here that the Japanese had carried their air field construction that near to completion.

From an American base in the Andreanof Islands, opposite Kiska, a dispatch said that on March 31,

Herculean Boost

One $3,250,000 Sale Sends District Bond Total Soaring

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

The largest bond subscription reported thus far in Washington's second war-loan campaign—for 3¼ million dollars—yesterday gave the District a herculean push toward its 42-million-dollar nonbanking quota and raised known sales far above the 13-million-dollar level.

The huge purchase was made by Acacia Mutuel Life Insurance Co., whose president, William Montgomery, recalled that his firm was the largest purchaser of First Victory Loan bonds in the Washington area during the December campaign. Acacia bought 2½ per cent long-term bonds of 1964-69.

The only other large sale reported yesterday was to the International Business Machines Corp., which, through its secretary-treasurer, J. G. Phillips, bought $100,000 of Government securities through the District War Finance Committee. These two purchases, added to the known total as of Wednesday night—$10,257,885.75—brought the District's reported total to $13,607,885.75.

Actually, Washington has raised far more than this sum but no figures were forthcoming yesterday from Richmond, headquarters of the Fifth Federal Reserve District—including Washington—which was reported swamped with orders because Thursday was a Government payday here.

Too—and because it was payday—banks stayed open longer in Washington on Thursday, thus facilitating purchase and, it is reasonable to assume, increasing the sale of bonds. Exclusive of the Acacia and International purchases, Washington's known total does not include two full days' sales. By conservative estimate, the District should be past the one-third mark and well along to-

Reds Holding Firm In Bitter Clashes

Germans Suffer Severe Losses in Effort To Avoid Many Traps in All Sectors

By Natalia Rene
International News Service Staff Writer

Moscow (Saturday), April 17.—Determined Russian troops clung to their strong defensive positions Friday in spite of furious local German drives, then hurled the enemy back with severe losses in both men and equipment, it was announced today.

The regular midnight communique issued by the Soviet high command told of bitter local clashes in scattered sections as the Nazis sought to weaken Red defenses or batter their way out of Russian traps.

In the Kuban region, where the Germans are herded against the Kerch Straits by Russian troops which are exerting unrelenting pressure, the Nazis lashed out in a number of furious drives. Their numerically superior forces gathered in one sector won for them temporary possession of a strategic height. At the end of the day, however, the Reds charged into the German ranks and threw the enemy legions from the hill with heavy losses.

In an adjoining sector, the Soviets beat back a series of tank-led infantry thrusts which also collapsed after suffering serious losses.

Three hundred German dead, 4 tanks and 2 selfpropelled guns were left on the battlefield south of Balakleya by retreating Nazis who raced for the shelter of their lines after a heavy drive had been shattered.

Once again Red artillery dominated the action along the routes approaching Smolensk on the Central Front, where for the last few days heavy Russian guns have been tossing destructive volleys into German positions. Friday they wrecked 11 enemy pillboxes and dugouts and destroyed 8 machine-gun posts, the midnight statement declared.

An earlier statement announced that Russian troops in the Kuban occupied a center of resistance and held it despite heavy, costly counterattacks. This communique also told of artillery action along the Central Front in which three German blockhouses were smashed and an ammunition dump exploded. It added that on the Leningrad Front a squadron of Red stormoviks raided an enemy airdrome and destroyed 13 grounded planes.

Nazis Mobilizing Norwegians, Oslo Says

By Edwin Shanke
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, April 16.—Reliable reports from Oslo today said that Norwegian youths are being mobilized under compulsion for actual military service in violation of international law and that a plan to send them to the war fronts as unneeded or rejected labor conscripts is fomenting the most serious crisis in three years of Nazi rule in Norway.

Another report from Norway during the day said the first boatload of Norwegians impressed for work under the labor mobilization act was taken to Germany from Oslo last week.

Some of the mobilized men already had been put into uniform, the Oslo reports said, adding that they had been forced to surrender all their Norwegian identification papers. Some were said to have taken the oath of allegiance to the German army under pressure while others refused, and nearly all were reported to have refused to sign German contracts or give an oath to Hitler.

The Oslo version was that the Nazi officials had informed the youths they would serve for the war's duration, ignoring protests that they originally had been mobilized for six months in service.

As the word spread that men were being sent to Germany, more and more Norwegians have refused to report at mobilization centers.

The mobilization was ordered ostensibly to get manpower for German industry, and many Norwegians were reported sent to factories where employers have told authorities they have no use for them due to shortages of raw material, machinery and tools. Such a situation supported the belief that total mobilization actually is aimed at control of all Norwegian youth for outright military service.

Newsprint Use Cut 5.5% During March

New York, April 16 (AP).—Reports to the American Newspaper Publishers Association compiled today indicated newspapers used during March 5.5 per cent less newsprint than in the corresponding month of 1942 and 8.3 per cent less than in March of 1941.

Daily newspapers reporting to the A. N. P. A. consumed 237,111 tons this March compared with 251,042 in March a year ago and 258,518 in March, 1941.

Power to Cut Dollar Killed

ing in the morning.

"It seems to me that this is a peculiarly bad time to ask for this power," Taft continued. "I can't think of any better advertising (for bonds) than for Congress to tell the American people that these bonds cannot be devalued."

At least 12 members of the 20-man committee were polled in favor of elimination of the devaluation authority. Four of these were Democrats and eight were Republicans. Only one committeeman, Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah, publicly opposed the move.

Even Morgenthau conceded that devaluation authority was "not a matter of life and death." A heated controversy involving the stability of bonds while the Treasury was trying to sell them, he admitted, would do more harm than deletion of the authority which expires June 30.

There was no committee opposition to continuation of the stabilization fund created June 30, 1934, when President Roosevelt made the dollar worth 59.6 per cent of its pre-depression value and gold worth $35 an ounce, and since used this to stabilize United States and other world currencies.

The Secretary, nevertheless, had an unhappy time before the committee.

He was asked by Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut, if he considered currency stabilization and dollar devaluation "essential to each other," and, perforce, his answer was "No."

Danaher then wanted to know if "we wouldn't be on sounder ground if we had a dollar on which the whole world could place dependence," and Morgenthau partially based his reply on the fact that "Congress has given this power for nine years and the President has not chosen to use it (to devalue the dollar further)."

"I have always felt that it (the power) was an effective defensive weapon to have in case some other country should start a devaluation war," he went on. "It is a useful thing to have."

But Senator Taft objected that this "club in the closet argument is very weak because it is only a 15 per cent club (meaning that the dollar might be further devalued that much) while (Soviet Premier) Stalin has a 100 per cent club."

"You can't argue that he (the President) ought to have this power because he hasn't used it. The disuse of the devaluation power is rather an argument why we shouldn't give it to him," the Senator added.

Chandler Pleads For Pacific Action

Conditions Named For Martinique Head Pledges Aid to Allies

By the Associated Press

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 16. Admiral Georges Robert, French Commissioner for Martinique and Guadaloupe, said in a letter to the Associated Press today that he was willing to join the fight against the Axis under these conditions:

1. That this would not force him into rebellion against the French government.

2. That the Allies permit the Fighting French to form a unity under one authority, vested with sovereign rights, instead of having the French under two factions represented presently by the De Gaullists and the adherents of Gen. Henri Giraud.

3. That joining the struggle would continue to safeguard the interests of the French Antilles.

In his letter Admiral Robert said he had remained aloof from the concerted drive to liberate the French motherland because, he held, participation under the present circumstances would risk endangering the interests of the French Antilles, without materially aiding in liberating France.

He expressed some chagrin at the manner in which the fighting French had been treated by the Allies and added:

"This had only confirmed me each day in my prudence.' '

Aid to MacArthur And Aleutian Drive Also on His Program

Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky declared in the Senate yesterday that America's high command must carry the war to the enemy in the Pacific or run the risk of having eventually to fight Japan alone with the help of China.

In a two-hour speech which won him congratulations from the Republican side, but led to several clashes with Democrats, including Majority Leader Barkley, also of Kentucky, Senator Chandler demanded more equipment primarily for Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the South Pacific, and for the American forces in Alaska.

One by one he praised the generals who are leading America's armed forces, from Chief of Staff Marshall, down, but he obsreved that in view of the "direct menace" the Japanese in the Aleutians now offer this country, "I can't help remember that there have been times in our history when our statesmen and leaders have been outgeneraled, outtalked, and overtalked."

This, in part, was Chandler's renly to the remark of Senator Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, that it was doubtful whether the Kentuckian had the overall view of the war that the high command had.

"I'm pleading, Senator," he said to Hill, "Guadalcanal and New Guinea won't do much good if the Jap fleet comes down from Singapore, and MacArthur hasn't the planes to stop them."

Reinforcements Sent

Of the Alaskan Front, Chandler said that in fairness to the Army and to President Roosevelt, reinforcements were sent to Alaska after his Military Affairs Subcommittee made its report urging drive the Japs from Kiska but that these were "wholly inadequate" to do the job of ousting the Japs from their bases in the Western Aleutians. He asserted that the Japs now have airfields about complete in these islands, a fact which Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington disputed.

Chandler said that he was wholeheartedly in favor of helping the British and Russians break the power of Hitler, "but I have to envision a time when with Germany prostrate, we should be left entirely alone except with the loyal support of China, a magnificent people, to fight the Japanese."

"Most of you will recall a suggestion in the speech of the honorable Winston Curchill a fortnight ago in which he promised his own people—the British people—that when the European war was over their boys would return home—at least there will be partial demobilization.

"We have no assurance that Russia will ever fight Japan."

Senator Taft Agrees

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio agreed that without help it was a "hopeless hope" that China would stay in the war for two more years, but he suggested that to equip planes, it would be necessary to reopen the Burma Road.

Majority Leader Barkley joined with Senator Hill in declaring that the questions of strategy and supply must be determined by those with the facts on which to base an "overall view" and not by the individual commanders at the front.

But when Barkley said he had been told that unless the Japs get to Kodiak in Alaska, they would not be a menace, Chandler pointed out that that would mean the occupation of Dutch Harbor, and said "if the Army doesn't fear that, I'm more frightened than ever."

As Chandler wound up his speech, Senators Johnson of California, Moore of Oklahoma, Holman of Oregon and Wiley of Wisconsin (Republicans) took turns in shaking hands with him.

Kiska Pounded Eight More Times

American fliers reported the Japanese to be stronger than ever on both Kiska and nearby Attu Island despite 320 tons of explosives dropped on those two islands in March.

A veteran Aleutians combat pilot who had just returned from a raid said "the Japanese heavy and light gun fire was the heaviest yet."

"More lead was thrown into the air at us today than a month ago and it was more deadly," he said. A study of reconnaissance photographs bore out his personal observations by showing that the enemy had more gun implacements on the two islands at the end of March than at the beginning.

The immediate aim of the present offensive appears to be to prevent the Japanese from getting their air field on Kiska into operation. Success in this endeavor would keep Kiska as little more than a death trap for the enemy, the Japanese having been able to make little use of the island since they first occupied it last June.

Failure to prevent completion and operation of the field, however, would greatly increase the dangers besetting American pilots fighting the battle of Kiska by permitting the Japanese to put up land-based fighter-plane opposition. This might minimize American raids to the point where the Japanese could finish the development of Attu Island as a bomber base for attacking American positions.

Yesterday's naval communique also disclosed that on Thursday, Solomons time, American planes, presumably from Guadalcanal, bombed Jap installations at Munda, air base on New Georgia Island, for the 106th time since late last November.

In the afternoon dive bombers and fighters attacked enemy installations at nearby Vila on Kolombangara Island and destroyed a building believed to be a power generating station.

Landon Advocates 'Real War Council'

New York, April 16 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, Republican presidential candidate in 1936, declared today that the United States needs "a real and actual and functioning war council" to aid in the settlement of home-front problems.

of a "Southeast Pacific force" of the Pacific Fleet was also announced earlier.

It is believed that Admiral Nimitz, as commander in chief, Pacific Fleet, still exercises some general authority over the other fleets in the Pacific, although Admiral Carpender's Seventh Fleet is understood to be a part of General MacArthur's command in the Southwest Pacific.

The naval unit in that area, Knox said, "has always been in existence." He declined to say whether or not it had been strengthened in recent months, though declaring there "have been changes." This fleet is said to have been built around the surviving ships of the old Asiatic Fleet.

In announcing the assignments of the four Navy captains just promoted to the newly revived rank of commodore, the Navy said it was planned to appoint other officers to this grade who hold commands of certain fleet units and small task groups.

For the time being, the rank will be confined primarily to officers on sea duty, it was said, though shore posts may be recommended for such advancement.

bombed again, the Friday communique reported. Hits were scored on planes in dispersal areas at the airdrome.

Other Allied planes raided Rabaul, New Britain, where fires were started at the Lakuani airdrome. Japanese shipping and installations at three islands northeast of Australia also underwent bombings.

Meanwhile, there was a lull in Japan's aerial offensive, which had included three large-scale bombings in four days at Port Moresby and Milne Bay, New Guinea.

(In Washington, Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky appealed to the Senate to use its influence to provide General MacArthur with "adequate planes, men and equipment to conduct an offensive against the Japanese." His plea came a day after Secretary of War Stimson had assured a press conference that more planes for the Southwest Pacific would be forthcoming.

(A belated version of Wednesday's 100-plane attack on Milne Bay was made Friday by Imperial Tokyo headquarters, which asserted that 11 Allied transports were sunk and 44 planes shot down. By contrast, Allied headquarters reported 30 Japanese planes were shot down while only three small Allied ships were damaged.)

British Better Hill Positions, Beat Off Foe

ham, announced the d -truction of two Italian destroyers by the Royal Navy off Sicily last night and indicated that the British Mediterranean fleet was ready for any attempt by the Axis to evacuate troops by sea.

The Allied communique, describing the fighting in the Medjez-El-Bab area, said the enemy fought fiercely for the British-held heights "but all his counterattacks were eventually beaten off and the high ground remains in our hands."

The Germans have fortified El Ahmera strongly as a key defense point but they have been raided many times during the winter by Allied patrols.

(The day's German communique also spoke of fierce local attacks in the area, stressing their own counterattacks.

Say Real Battle Beginning

(The German radio, quoting Berlin military circles, said the "real battle for Tunisia is only now beginning." This was based on what the broadcast described as the "favorable defense positions" of the Axis troops. "One of the main worries during the battles of the past few months has been to supply Axis troops with fuel but that is now a minor point," the broadcast said.)

This was borne out at least in part by the placing of guns, defenses and dugouts of the Axis troops which indicate that their officers intend to try to hold on, despite Allied superiority in planes and artillery.

Intelligence officers said that among the Nazi forces are battalions made up of anti-Nazi Germans who only recently arrived in Africa, having been inducted into the army in many cases directly from concentration camps. Nazi officers and noncommissioned officers stiffen their ranks.

To the south, French units continued their advance in the mountainous region north of Kararhoun yesterday and captured another 100 prisoners.

Air Pounding Continues

Although the weather remained bad, Allied bombers and fighters kept up their assaults on Axis air fields. R. A. F. Wellingtons struck at enemy airdromes in southern Sardinia Wednesday night.

Fighter planes shot up motor trucks above Enfidaville and along the Tunis-Hammamet Road, while Mitchell bombers raided landing grounds at Ste. Marie du Zit and Wellingtons followed with an attack on the airfield at Korba.

GOVERNMENT GIRL drive for the division.

"We have had little or no difficulty," Miss Lazo said.

With 3000 employes in the State Department, 1047 dollar contributions already have been turned in to the Treasury Department. "We will have far more than 50 per cent of our contributions today," she explained.

Other workers for the State Department nearing the 100 per cent mark include Kathleen Rust, Phyllis Fleming and Despina Bojokles. Forty active workers have given excellent account of their various departments.

Indicating the feeling and general willingness in every agency during the campaign, Mrs. Zelle M. Thomas, supervising clerk for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, yesterday said:

"I think the GOVERNMENT GIRL warplane contribution is a swell idea and it occurred to me that we—the Government people—should follow this thing through and give a dollar every month to buy more bombers.

"Our Minute Section, Secretary's Office, RFC, is going over 100 per cent. We want our boys to have what it takes to win this war now."

Excellent Results

Mrs. Alva Patten, RFC campaign leader, said earlier that their workers expect to be among the contenders for first honors at the end of the drive.

Excellent results also have been shown by the CAA. Miss Louise Ross of Director John P. Morris' office, War Training Service, said "we have girls actively taking contributions in every section of the organization." Key workers include Bertha Lego, Louise Coomes, Lillian David, Dorothy Barber and Miss Ross.

Huge Purchase Sends Bond Total Soaring

Edgar Morris, chairman of the District committee's business division, reported "good" returns from volunteer salesmen working under five team captains—Martin T. Weigand, George P. Mangan, John G. Scharf, Harry L. Merrick and Joseph C. McGarraghy—but had no figures to release.

He said his workers were selling bonds to virtually everyone approached—a success level which he attributed to the fact that the war, as more and more men go into the service, is coming closer home to the individual, and to the widespread and continuous publicity which has been accorded the campaign.

Morris urged that people not wait, however, until they are requested to buy bonds. "Only you know how much you can lend," he said.

Treasury officials reminded the public yesterday that next Thursday is Hitler's birthday. If you wish to send Adolf a present—say a 2-ton block-buster, for which your bonds will pay—the Army Air Forces will be very happy to deliver it.

O'Mahoney Asks Investigation of OWI by Senate

A Senate investigation into Office of War Information policies was called for yesterday by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming.

O'Mahoney warned that in a war "requiring participation of all our people, it is of the utmost importance that all channels of information shall be kept free."

"When the people know the facts, we may rely on their judgment," he observed.

O'Mahoney introduced a resolution empowering the Judiciary Committee or one of its subcommittees, to conduct the investigation of OWI and "give Congress a clear understanding of the methods by which it operates in issuing the information upon which the people of this country must depend to form their judgments of public events."

He cited the recent departure of 15 OWI writers in a disagreement over policy. The writers have declared that the agency now is in the hands of "promoters."

Daylight Raids on Axis Given British Approval

First Army Headquarters, April 15 (Delayed).—American Flying Fortresses have given the Allies "one of the greatest single striking forces ever to be had by an army anywhere," a ranking Royal Air Force commodore said today.

"We didn't believe in daylight bombing as you know," he went on, "but fortunately the Americans persisted and knew what they were talking about, and it has worked out well, for with our night bombers we now have an undreamed-of round-the-clock hitting power."

New Bill at the Earle Runs to Music, But Loud

'Something to Shout About' Is Lusty Screen Musical and Ina Ray Hutton Has Misplaced Soft Pedal on Stage

"SOMETHING TO SHOUT ABOUT." Columbia picturization of a story by Fred Schiller, adapted to the screen by Lou Breslow and Edward Eliscu, costarring Don Ameche, Janet Blair and Jack Oakie, with William Gaxton, Cobina Wright, jr., Veda Ann Borg, Hazel Scott, Jaye Martin, Lily Norwood, James "Chuckles" Walker, David Lichine, Teddy Wilson and His Band and the Bricklayers dog act. Produced and directed by Gregory Ratoff. At the Earle Theater.

THE INDISCRIMINATE AMUSEMENT-SEEKER, in search of noisy, slam-bang, tuneful and moderately comic entertainment suitable to the "silly season," could do worse than drop in on "Something to Shout About," Gregory Ratoff's safety-valve for the emotional stresses of the war, now on view at the Earle Theater. It has a little bit of everything in it except novelty of plot, and there is even a touch of that along toward the end.

If that doesn't afford sufficient stimulation to the less subtle and subdued of the carnival moods, there is Ina Ray Hutton and her all-male orchestra on the stage, with the great diapason stop nailed down most of the way and some clever specialists tossed in here and there for good measure and variety.

Altogether, the new bill on Thirteenth Street is as unrestrained and fortissimo an exercise in springtime abandon as the gusty vernal breezes are apt to blow in.

"Something to Shout About" starts off as the old one about the shy little girl from Altoona who has written a suitcase full of songs she would like to hear up and down Broadway. By missing the train back home, she gets herself shepherded into a Forty-fifth Street boarding house for "at liberty" vaudeville artists, whose only negotiable assets are their hearts of gold. Through them she becomes an object of interest to the once-great producer of a recent string of failures, now being angeled by a rich divorcee who feels that with her and her bankroll as star his new musical can't miss. So on its opening in Philadelphia it is the most colossal flop of them all—until by virtue of a number of propitious desertions, strange disappearances and a smart idea on the part of the boarding-house keeper, it scores a smash hit on Broadway as a revival of old-time, big-time vaudeville. Therein lies its immunity from charges of being strictly old hat—except for the revelation of Janet Blair as one of the most effective of the singing comediennes, Hazel Scott's incomparable dexterity at the piano and six teasing tunes by Cole Porter.

When "Something to Shout About"—and that is the title of the play within the play—gets into its vaudeville stride, including the earlier scenes in that madhouse haven for the vagrants from the varieties, the trite theme of "triumph out of defeat" and all that sort of thing is largely lost sight of. The thread of romance between the press agent and the "Irving Berlin in skirts" is not, quite, and the lusty humor of the boniface of the vaudevillians laces the whole business fairly well together with laughs. Those songs Cole Porter wrote for the gal from Altoona to write bob up at both opportune and inopportune times further to distract the attention of the cash customer from the fact that he somehow seems to have been here before. Rehearsal scenes for the great Philadelphia fiasco permit the introduction of more than one far-flung and volcanic "production number." As I was saying, somewhere in it is something for everybody.

Cast Is Ably Led

The four top roles in the frolic are splendidly filled by Don Ameche, Janet Blair, Jack Oakie and William Gaxton, proselyted from musical comedy and Victor Moore—taking into consideration, of course, the nature of their "dramatic" material. Jack Oakie's broadening shoulders bear most of the comedy burden lightly. He has never given a more ebullient performance than as the old vaudevillian turned landlord for all the others. Ameche and Gaxton, as press agent and producer, are a trifle less free-reined, but Janet Blair has the time of her life in a role that discloses an entirely new catalogue of lively abilities, of which "My Sister Eileen" gave only a hint. She began as soloist with a name band and the delightful quality of her mellow, mezzo voice makes it clear why. Hazel Scott's amazing piano technique would be a brilliant decoration of any picture and you can't beat The Bricklayers among the dog acts. In between these extremes, Cobina Wright, jr., Veda Ann Borg, David Lichine, dancer; Teddy Wilson and His Band, James "Chuckles" Walker's hoofing and other interpolations add to the unique design of a flashy mosaic.

Ina Ray Hutton, on the stage, continues to be one of the most engaging of the conductors, with a distinctly individual personality and technique. She is the only orchestra leader I know who "conducts" the audience as enthusiastically as she does her band. Besides that, she does a bit of singing on her own and presents a phosphorescent number that is extremely effective. Her 15 instrumentalists are a capable crew, with some nice solo artists among them. The hit soloist, however, is Stuart Foster, baritone vocalist. For diversity, Dorothy Keller, one of the ablest of the tap dancers, and Walter Nilsson, late of "Hellzapoppin," are introduced. Mr. Nilsson can do more things with a unacycle than Miss Keller can with her feet.

To round out the exuberant goings-on with some show of seriousness, "Right of Way," explaining why transportation must primarily be devoted to the war needs, and the new issue of picturized news events are added to the week's melodious melange.

'Sister Eileen' Joins the Songsters

JANET BLAIR AND DON AMECHE
two of the stars in Columbia's production of "Something to Shout About," the effervescent musical which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater. Also out in front among the stellar principals are Jack Oakie, William Gaxton, from the musical comedy stage, and Cobina Wright, jr., all under the direction of the galvanic Gregory Ratoff.

HEDDA HOPPER

The Search Is Ended

Hollywood, Calif., April 16.—The search for Marilynn Miller is at an end. Little Joan Leslie's got the part . . . George Brent, besides William Powell, will be in "Heavenly Body" . . . From Washington comes word that Col. Darryl Zanuck remains in the Army regardless . . . Fred Allen said he was through with the air at the end of this year and he meant it. It was Director Alfred Hitchcock who talked him into doing another picture. He's never liked himself on the screen. Well, he's never had the right story, but with Hitchy at the helm he'll be able to do his own ad libs and should emerge a big star. There's one of the funniest men in the whole entertainment industry . . . Paulette Goddard is fishing in deep water down Mexico way. Only the biggest fish for little P. G.'s hook.

JOAN LESLIE

A Solid Hit

Mark Hellinger's musical, "Thank Your Lucky Stars," according to those who saw the sneak preview, is a smash hit. Bette Davis' jitterbug number is solid. So is Eddie Cantor. Ditto Dinah Shore . . . Warners just bought "Handbook for Jealousy," Sinclair Lewis' newest. That, too, will employ all their stars . . . Phyllis Brooks is wearing a new medal suit. Among imitation medals on her chest, she had one real one—"E" for effort. She was proud of that 'cause she said, "Boy! Did I earn it!" . . . Soon as Victor McLaglen finishes "Roger Touhy" and "Guadalcanal Diary" he's off to buy more cattle for his 760-acre ranch near Fresno.

Don't Crowd, Girls

Dick Thorpe's having dame trouble. He begins "Cry Havoc" on the 26th and so far he's only got Joan Blondell and Merle Oberon. He needs a dozen more dames . . . Ginny Simms has become so popular on the air waves her salary's almost as big as that of Judy Garland. Metro's signed her for "Meet the People." . . . Capt. Gene Raymond came to town to see his brother, who's an air cadet. Planes out end of the week for another visit with Jeanette MacDonald in New York.

Clothes Not Rationed

Irene Dunne is going glamorous in "White Cliffs of Dover." Designer Irene has done 22 dream dresses for her. Dunne tells me that Van Johnson, who's going to be all right since that brain surgery, is about the sweetest boy she's ever met. Every day he brought her a present on the set of "A Guy Named Joe." Sometimes half a pound of tea, a quarter pound of butter, maybe just ewo eggs. But he always brought something. It's nice that Metro-Goldwyn will hold the picture until he recovers.

Keep the Left High!

Gregory Ratoff didn't know how much of a chance he took when he started telling four professional fighters—Eddie River, John Stuart, Lew Brady, and Sam Herman—what to do with their fists in "Russia." Maybe he could have directed it better if one had popped him on the jaw . . . "Just call me Cupid," says Gus Schilling, who carries love notes between Deanna Durbin and Joseph Cotten in "Hers to Hold." He's so good the part has been built up to last eight weeks instead of two . . . K. T. Stevens, Sam Wood's daughter, has all her parts at Columbia hand picked by her daddy. Unless they're right, she doesn't do 'em . . . Ivan Lebedeff, actor, has written a novel called "Brothers," about an Englishwoman who married an Englishman, then a German. Had a son by each, with brother fighting brother. Warners are considering buying it.

Coupon No. 17

Dance Director Nick Castle's collection of dancing shoes has become famous. Each star he's worked with gave him a pair—Shirley Temple, Bill Robinson, George Murphy, Jane Withers, Linda Darnell, Ann Miller, Barbara Stanwyck, Betty Grable, Nicholas Brothers. Now they wish they had 'em back. I saw the perfect dinner guest, Arthur Alexander, tear out his No. 17 stamp and hand it to his hostess, Mrs. Fitzhugh-Green, the other night. He was immediately asked for dinner the following night

Broadway Glossary

New York, April 16.

FAME: William Bendix, who was a minor Hollywood actor until he was given a feature role in "Wake Island," has been making personal appearance tours for Paramount. He was the guest of honor at a film-luncheon in Toronto recently, where all the speakers referred to his excellent performance in "Dr. Cyclops." Monica Mugan, commentator for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, asked Bendix to make a speech too. "Make a speech," she urged. "Even if it's only three words. Make a speech to the fans who loved you in 'Dr. Cyclops' " . . . Bendix obliged. He said: "Wasn't in it."

WILLIAM BENDIX

RESPONSE: William Allen White, the veteran Emporia editor, will speak at the United Nations in America dinner. He was asked to come to New York a few hours earlier, to be interviewed by the press. White refused . . . "My experience with press conferences," the editor explained, "is that I always ask reporters so many questions, they don't get around to me. And at the end, we both get mad."

ENTERPRISE: The Chicago Sun had an editorial shake-up a few days ago. It involved the appointment of E. Z. Dimitman as executive editor, the resignation of Turner Catledge as editor, and the decision of Marshall Field to take the editor's post . . . while these changes were taking place, Silliman Evans, the publisher, began to chew his cigar, wryly . . . Frank Maggio, a photographer, took a picture of Evans. That photo won a $25 prize from the Cigar Manufacturers Association of America.

PROBLEM: Former Senator Clyde Herring, assistant to OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown, is completing his survey of the office. When he began this survey, Herring announced that he planned to get rid of all OPA executives who were (1) professors, (2) lawyers, (3) men who had never met a payroll or (4) had never carried a precinct . . . The Herring investigators now have come to Paul A. Porter, who is in charge of the Rent Division. Porter's background is remarkable. He was (1) a professor, having lectured on Administrative Law at Catholic University; (2) a lawyer—Washington council for C. B. S. But (3) he owned a chain of Oklahoma papers, where he had to meet payrolls and (4) he helped to get the Midwest farm vote for F. D. R. in 1936.

TRIUMPH: John L. Lewis will win a wage increase for his miners, and also will get for them the portal-to-portal wage scale—which means that a miner's pay will be reckoned from the time he enters the mine, instead of from the time he reaches his place underground . . . But Lewis expects even a greater victory—something he never has been able to achieve before—an invitation to the White House, for a social meeting with the President.

CHATTER: Now that LaGuardia isn't going into the Army, Tom Thatcher, who was to have been the deputy mayor, probably will be rewarded with a Court of Appeals judgeship. In that event, George Z. Medalie will be named to the New York Supreme Court . . . Helen Jacobs, the tennis champ now in the WAVES, is completing a novel about the service. Dodd, Mead will publish it . . . "Oklahoma" was to have been produced as "Cherokee Strip." But the Theater Guild abandoned that title for fear that the customers might think it's burlesque.

RIDE: An Army private, stationed at Fort Hamilton in Brooklyn, met Lieut. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt of the United States Navy. The soldier told the multimillionaire officer of the subway trip he makes to Brooklyn each morning at 7 . . . "I'm stationed near there, for temporary training," said Vanderbilt. "Maybe we can go out together each morning" . . . "That would be nice," sighed the private, dreaming of a lift in a Rolls-Royce or a Cadillac . . . "Good. Meet me at 6:45," said Vanderbilt, "in the B. M. T. at Times Square."

Director Coppers His Own Bets

Hollywood. — Director Lothar Mendes has his own peculiar way of deciding when a scene filmed for a movie should be retaken.

He exhibited it here while directing "Flight For Freedom," air epic of the woman flyer lost over the Pacific in prewar days on a secret Government mission to Jap-held isles.

At end of an important scene, he asked costars Fred MacMurray and Rosalind Russell: "Did you like it?" Then he queried camera and sound crew members. All chorused: "Yes."

"Ah," said Mendes, "I did, too. So—we'll shoot it again."

He explained: "Self-satisfaction is always bad."

Hatchet Buried—Not in Each Other!

Hollywood, April 15 (INS).—The Hedy Lamarr-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer misunderstanding is all over but the shouting. Hedy and her agent, Charles Feldman, were on the lot today and had a very friendly talk. So, by the time this is printed, the chances are that Hedy will be back getting her clothes fitted for "Heavenly Body" and all the contract trouble will be yesterday's news and soon forgotten. Lucille Ball takes another assignment, which is all right with her. She wasn't eager to substitute for Hedy.

HEDY LAMARR

I don't know whether Lamarr gets the $2000 called for in her contract, but it's reasonably sure the terms of her contract will be carried out. She had refused to make any more pictures when M-G-M questioned the validity of her raise because of the $25,000 ceiling. Well, that's out now, so there's no reason for the company not to give her the raise.

Tomorrow is the day Olga San Juan, 18-year-old Spanish girl from Puerto Rico, arrives in Hollywood to try to conquer the movies. Olga sang at the El Morocco in New York and one of the Paramount talent scouts saw her and heard her and she made a test. Result—she was signed and will make her debut in "Rainbow Island." She is a little on the order of Maria Montez, we were told. She stands 5 feet 2 inches in her stocking feet and has all the allure and charm of the Latin girls.

Chatter in Hollywood: The Bogarts, Humphrey and Mayo Methot, back from weeks in the desert, telephoned to say hello today. They stopped in town only long enough to gather up their clothes and hie themselves to Bogey's boat. They were on location at Brawley for "Sahara" and every night after work the Bogarts would put on a show for the service men—in the open. Three thousand of them would sit around on the ground while the Bogarts emoted.

Never let it be said that the green-eyed monster of professional jealousy has attacked Margaret O'Brien. The other day Margaret and her mother ran into a horde of youngsters outside the M-G-M gate who immediately swarmed around her with autograph books. Very laboriously Margaret was spelling out her name when Greer Garson's car pulled up. The fickle little fans immediately flocked over to Greer to get her autograph—and, standing patiently at the end of the line, was Margaret. Greer laughingly apologized for taking her "audience away from her." "Oh, that's all right," said Margaret politely, "it's hard for me to write anyway."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: After 10 years of a childless marriage, Mrs. Bernard Vorhaus and her husband, now in the Army, will welcome the stork. He was formerly a director-producer; Arturo Cordova was a visitor on Lupe Velez's R. K. O. set and it looked as if all was again sweetness and light; Ronnie, the cute Cairn terrier in "Air Force," has himself a job in "The Uninvited" at Paramount. Snoopy, a trained squirrel, is in the same movie associating with all the spooks.

Saw Zasu Pitts and her pretty daughter, Ann Gallery, at the Farmers' Market. Zasu told me she leaves for Detroit to start rehearsals in "The Bat;" Norma Shearer has gone to Dallas to see her bridegroom, Marty Arrouge.

Giraud Stands Firm on Giving France Vote

By the Associated Press

Algiers, April 16.—Gen. Henri Giraud hopes to lead an army of 300,000 Frenchmen in the coming invasion of Europe and to plant the tricolor in the City of Metz, old capital of Lorraine.

"On that day," he said in a speech yesterday at Constantine, "I shall pass on my hand (relinquish my power.) Then France will be able to form a provisional government.

"At that time 40 million Frenchmen will say what they desire, but I have no wish to revive the follies which led to catastrophe in 1940."

Giraud said "we have 400,000 men under arms" and warned that this army must not be hampered by disorder in its rear.

"I will not permit a dictatorship or a dictator," he declared.

Political observers here regarded Giraud's statements as a final, conclusive answer to the proposal of the Fighting French led by Gen. Charles de Gaulle that a provisional government be formed now to govern the French empire.

Giraud has proposed, instead, that an overseas council be organized for the purpose. It was believed he objected to a provisional government at this time on the grounds that France might find itself saddled with a regime not of its own choosing after the Axis is beaten.

Spain Offers To Act in Role Of Peacemaker

By International News Service

Barcelona, April 16.—Spain today offered to act as world peacemaker to bring about an immediate cessation of hostilities.

Count Francisco Jordana, Spanish Foreign Minister declared in a speech at Barcelona that "Spain is ready to cooperate in the speedy restoration of world peace."

The Foreign Minister urged the collaboration of other neutral countries as well as the Vatican in seeking world-wide peace. He also took occasion to echo the oft-expressed sentiments of his government leader, Francisco Franco, by denouncing communism as "the gravest menace to world peace."

For several weeks reports have come from "inside Europe" suggesting that peace feelers may be extended through neutral countries, such as Spain, Portugal, Switzerland or Turkey, or through the Holy See. Informed quarters in London and Washington, however, have pointed out that such peace proposals were useless in view of the "unconditional surrender" agreement reached at Casablanca by United Nations leaders.

"Spain," said Jordana, "who has gathered around her leaders to face all the peril that may assail her, aims at seeking peace, and will go on preparing for that peace as far as it is possible.

"The Holy See and countries who have kept out of war no doubt will be able to facilitate the advent of peace and cooperate in drafting treaties for the reorganization of the world."

Jordana spoke at ceremonies celebrating the 450th anniversary of Columbus' return to Spain from the new world.

Crop Incentive Fund Approved

measure, yesterday voiced opposition to three of its provisions.

Its executive committee, in session here, opposed elimination of crop insurance "at this time" and also opposed the requirement that would prohibit the Federal Land Bank, the Production Credit Banks and the Banks for Cooperatives "from making a loan unless the applicant could prove his application for a loan had been rejected by a bank or other credit agency."

Its opposition to limiting time served by AAA committeemen to 100 days a year, as an economy measure, was made pointless when that section of the bill was stricken out on a point of order.

Farmers' Union Protests

The National Farmers' Union, which objects to strict economy appropriations of the bill and especially to its abolishment of the FSA, declared yesterday that the Appropriations Committee had no authority for refusing authorization for parity payments on the 1943 crops.

Secretary Wickard announced incentive payments in January for farmers who increased their production of dried beans, potatoes, truck crops, sweet potatoes, soybeans, grain sorghum, peanuts, flax and dried peas. Payments for all the crops vary, but typical payments are those promised potato growers and truck farmers.

Farmers were promised 50 cents a bushel for all potatoes they raised between 90 and 110 per cent of their increased production goals.

Truck farmers were promised $50 an acre for the same percentage of their goals, provided approved war crops were raised.

Added to Market Price

These incentive payments, which Department of Agriculture officials yesterday estimated would yield about $100 on the average to all farmers participating, would be paid by the Government and be in addition to the market price.

When it appeared Congress would not approve the incentive or "subsidy" idea, Food Administrator Chester Davis announced support prices for certain war crops—assuring farmers they would not get less than stated prices on their production, but not promising them the additional bonus.

24 Convicts Flee Georgia State Prison

By the Associated Press

Reidsville, Ga., April 16.—Georgia peace officers scoured the State tonight in a man hunt for 22 of the 24 desperate criminals who staged a mass break from the Tattnall State Prison early today.

Gov. Ellis Arnall ordered an immediate investigation of the escape.

Only the collaboration or the negligence of prison guards or employes made the break possible, the Governor charged. He offered a reward of $100 for the recapture of each fugitive.

One of the convicts surrendered in Reidsville, and another was captured at Lyons.

The fugitives were reported to be heavily armed, and officers were warned to take no chances with the convicts.

The break was led by Forrest Turner, 30; Leland Harvey, 34, and D. C. Black, Warden N. R. Duvall revealed.

The trio overpowered Guards B. G. Morrison, W. E. Overstreet and H. M. Spivey, took their keys and locked them in cells, then the leaders unlocked the cells of their fellow fugitives. As they fled they tore the wires from the prison's telephone switchboard to prevent the spread of an alarm.

They fled in two prison trucks and an automobile, the latter of which was found abandoned.

Harvey broke out of prison last December, but was recaptured three days later. Turner escaped from Georgia prisons six times prior to today.

London, April 16 (AP).—Herbert H. Lehman, United States Director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, was a luncheon guest of King George and Queen Elizabeth today at Buckingham Palace.

Earlier, he attended a meeting of the Inter-Allied Committee on Postwar Relief, of which Sir Frederick Leith-Ross is chairman.

Bipartisan Tax Effort Launched

legislation came with a rush late in the third week of a deadlock that had already led Republican leaders of both Senate and House to block proposals for an Easter adjournment and two-week vacation.

Rayburn Takes Lead

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas took the lead in reopening compromise negotiations and in the morning he conferred in his office with House Republican Leader Martin and House Democratic Leader McCormack, both of Massachusetts, and Chairman Doughton.

Martin had consistently demanded another chance for a House vote on the Ruml plan to abate one year of taxes for all individuals in starting pay-as-you go. This plan, modified and contained in the bill by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas was defeated late last month by 215 to 198 House votes. Doughton had suggested agreement to pass a no-forgiveness bill containing the the withholding collection feature, but Martin protested.

At the end of the conference, Rayburn said:

"We're going to try to forget the Ruml plan, and all other plans, and try to work out something that will be acceptable to all concerned."

Martin said:

"We had a little conference to see if it was possible to reach a compromise."

Doughton observed:

"The Ruml plan couldn't pass, and neither could the committee (no abatement) plan. We'll probably get something different than anything we've had."

Later, Ways and Means Democrats met, Ways and Means Republicans met, and at 7 p. m. they met together. With Doughton and Dewey were Representatives Cooper of Tennessee and Disney of Oklahoma (Democrats) and Knutson of Minnesota, Woodruff of Michigan and Reed of New York (Republicans).

Very Conciliatory

Nearly two hours later, Doughton came out to report that the evening session had been "very friendly and conciliatory" and also that "we made progress." Asked about the Doughton-Dewey compromise plan, the chairman observed, "It's not dead yet."

Knutson said that the compromise had been received "favorably."

Very Much Alive

Members also said that the compromise of Representatives Robertson of Virginia and Forand of Rhode Island, Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, was "very much alive" in the conference. This would abate the combined normal and first bracket surtax of 19 per cent for all individuals, and collect higher liabilities on the present system.

Other ideas receiving renewed attention were said to include a Ruml plan with a "ceiling" on the amount of forgiveness, and a proposal to assess the income tax payable this year on the sum of this year's income and the tax on last year's income. The second plan, like the Ruml plan, would by-pass collection of the tax on income of 1942, but would boost the "take" from 1943 income.

Police Report Confession in Berth Murder

Albany, Oreg., April 16 (AP).—Robert E. Lee Folkes' reported admission that he "couldn't get the woman in lower 13 out of my mind," and carefully planned his entrance to her berth and killed her with a knife after she resisted his advances was stated today by Lieut. E. A. Tetrick of the Los Angeles police homicide squad.

It was the first time the contents of asserted statements made by Folkes, charged with the murder of pretty Mrs. Martha Virginia James on a Southern Pacific Limited train before dawn January 23, were disclosed at his trial.

Tetrick testified that Folkes related he had been drinking in Portland, Oreg., before boarding the train. On his way through the train to the diner he passed through sleeping car D, where Mrs. James in lower 13 mistook him for a porter.

Quotes Cook's Story

She asked the cook to help her find her husband, Navy Ensign Richard F. James, who she thought might be on the same train. They became separated at Portland on their way from Seattle to San Diego.

The detective said Folkes' story continued:

Folkes told her he would look for her husband and agreed to meet her in 10 or 15 minutes in the vestibule. Instead of searching he joined a party in the diner and had some more drinks. At the appointed time he returned to the vestibule and told Mrs. James her husband was in the dining car attending a conference. Folkes rejoined the party and retired later.

"All the time I kept thinking of the woman in Lower 13." Tetrick quoted the asserted confession. "I couldn't get her off my mind.

Folkes arose about 3:30 a. m., the detective said, and went into sleeper D.

Puts Knift to Throat

There he walked back and forth unfastening the curtains of Lower 13. When he believed the coast was clear, he stepped inside.

The sleeping woman was lying on her back, with the bedcloths up to her armpits. Her right side was toward the curtain. She awoke at his touch.

He put the knife to her throat. When she asked, "Who are you?" Folkes replied:

"It makes no difference. Button those curtains or I'll cut your throat." He referred to the curtain buttons.

He said he reached toward the curtain, and as he did so she almost succeeded in shoving him from the berth.

"If you do that again, I'll cut your throat," Folkes said. She did it again and he cut her. He said he made one cut—not four or five.

He got out of the berth, ran back to the diner and went into the galley. He said he already had prepared the fire.

By the time the marine (Pvt. Harold Wilson, U. S. M. C.) occupant of upper 13 and first man to reach Mrs. James after the assault) came through the car, looking for the slayer, Muffins in the oven were well along.

As he concluded the statement, the detective said Folkes said:

"That's my story. I'm the killer. Now, can I have a drink?"

Hope Ridings Miller

"The whole international situation," says Hope Ridings Miller, "may be traced at a Washington party—by who bows frigidly to whom, and who smiles sunnily on whom. You can almost taste the formation of a treaty in the tea." And that was why Mrs. Miller consented to give up the excitement of the news department to take over The Post's society editorship. She secretly thought society pages could be made exciting, too—and has succeeded in proving her point. An article about the Indian on the buffalo nickel and a series on dime novels got Hope Miller her job on The Post. Her first years on the staff were spent in interviewing celebrities—Jane Cowl, Sinclair Lewis, Sonja Henie, Emil Ludwig, Marlene Dietrich, John L. Lewis. Then general assignment reporting, and finally the society editorship. Hope is proud of her accomplishments with the Post's society pages—their departure from the routine, their tremendous readership, the times they have been quoted in the Congressional Record, most of all, their recognition that there's a war going on.

Boost in Price Of Crude Oil Asked by Ickes

Petroleum Administrator Ickes has recommended a general crude oil price increase averaging 35 cents a barrel, he told the House Small Business Committee yesterday.

The recommendation was sent to the Office of Price Administration April 7, but an OPA official testified that after its receipt he told Price Administrator Prentiss Brown that he thought it was "a pretty bad time" for such an increase.

Brown also appeared before the committee, but did not testify on Ickes' recommendation. He did, however, tell the committee it was the "obligation" of his agency to increase the price of crude oil if such action was necessary for successful prosecution of the war.

Numerous witnesses representing independent oil producers from all sections of the Nation had testified earlier this week before both the Small Business and the House Interstate Committees that a crude oil price increase is necessary if production is to keep up with consumption and explorations are to be continued for new fields.

Chairman Patman (Democrat) of Texas observed that a crude oil rise probably would increase the cost of gasoline by about 1 cent a gallon.

The committee chairman then observed that approximately the same number of newspapers are sold daily in the Nation as gallons of gasoline are consumed, saying the former total around 44,000,000 circulation and gas sales approximate 42,000,000 gallons.

"Yet, there is no restrictions against any or all of the newspapers increasing the cost by a cent," said Patman.

18% of Auto Dealers Quit

The publication Automotive & Aviation Industries will say in its forthcoming issue that 18 per cent of the Nation's new passenger car and truck dealers have gone out of business since automobile rationing went into effect.

The survey says:

"There were 40,537 retail outlets for new cars and trucks in operation on January 1, 1942. This total had declined to 33,250 dealers as of March 1, 1943 . . .

"Repair service and in some cases entry into war production and other activities has accounted for the fact that the vast majority of dealers have remained in business."

March Fire Losses Soar

Fire losses in the United States during March were the highest at any time since 1932, the National Board of Fire Underwriters announced yesterday.

Losses last month were approximately $39,214,000, compared to the last record high of $39,270,000 during May, 1932, the report said.

March losses were 18 per cent higher than February losses and 29 per cent higher than losses in March, 1942, the survey showed.

For a fine record in war construction

This day, April 17th, 1943, is a proud one in our history. It is the day on which the Nation has seen fit to honor the contribution of the McShain Organization to the national war effort. "For their fine record in war construction," our men and women have been awarded the prized ARMY-NAVY "E".

We accept this tribute with pride and with deep appreciation. And we promise that our new flag, as it gallantly floats from its mast or glistens from our lapels, will be more than merely a symbol of past achievements recognized. It will be a constant reminder to us that there still are many tasks to be performed on the long road to Victory — and a heartfelt inspiration to make each job we do more outstanding than the last.

From this day forward, even more than ever, we'll do our best and "keep it flying."

Senate Votes 26 Million for Farm Labor

The Senate yesterday voted 39 to 18 to approve an appropriation of $26,100,000 for a farm labor program, receding from its former stand raising the amount to 40 million dollars.

In addition to agreeing to the smaller sum voted by the House, the upper body also agreed with the House in a provision that farm workers can not accept work in other than their home areas without the written consent of their county agents.

The sum agreed upon will be divided about equally between a local recruiting program managed on a State and county basis and a migrant worker program that includes provisions for importing farm labor through agreement with foreign countries.

The total program is placed under control of the Extension Service.

Meantime the Department of Agriculture announced four changes in its rationing of farm machinery and supplies.

The 150,000 pressure cookers to be produced in 1943 will be rationed by County Farm Rationing Committees, with preference given to groups and organizations who would make facilities available to many families.

Peanut pickers, instead of being rationed, will be distributed by peanut growers' associations. Fencing was removed from the rationing program and manufacturers of milking machines were ordered to make an immediate distribution of 90 per cent of their authorized production, reserving 10 per cent to meet emergency requirements. Manufacturers of grain and forage blowers and of stationary elevators were authorized to distribute 100 per cent of their production.

Salesman Reports Jewelry Theft

Theft of approximately $20,000 worth of jewelry was reported to police last night by Saul Smigrod, jewel salesman of New York City.

Smigrod told police he put down a brown, leather bag in a shop at 405 Eleventh Street Northwest yesterday and when he went to pick it up, it was gone. The contents, he said, consisted of rings and other jewelry.

Luxury Items To Be Freed of Price Ceilings

By Edward Jamieson

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Price ceilings on scores of luxury goods will be removed and these prices permitted to go as high as the demand will stand.

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown yesterday disclosed that he will approve the order releasing such civilian goods as jewelry, art objects, high-priced automobiles and other luxury items from price control.

At the same time, he told the House Small Business Investigating Committee that the Office of Price Administration will devote energetic attention to enforcement of actual "cost-of-living" price ceilings.

In allowing luxury prices to rise uncontrolled, Brown explained, it will be possible for the OPA to give more attention to enforcing price ceilings on food, clothing, rents and other esesntial goods which enter into the cost of living.

Authorities who have been urging such a move for some time pointed to experience in England, where no ceilings have been imposed on luxury goods. Purchase of these goods by persons with excess spending power has helped remove the pressure against normal cost-of-living prices and substantially simplified the administration of price control in that country, they said.

M. J. Holland's Funeral Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Michael J. Holland, 83, of 3508 Morrison Street Northwest will be held at the W. W. Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest, at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

In 1891 he enlisted in the Marine Corps and served in the field until 1905 when he was ordered to Marine Corps headquarters here. In 1932 he retired with the rank of lieutenant and title of assistant attorney.

Mr. Holland is survived by his wife, Annie, and a daughter, Janice Holland, well known artist and book illustrator.

Burial will be in the Arlington Cemetery following the funeral.

Chas. M. Schwab, Steel Millionaire, Died in Debt

New York, April 16 (AP).—Charles M. Schwab, who once turned down an offer of 50 million dollars for a half interest in the Bethlehem Steel Co., actually was broke when he died, an estate tax appraisal disclosed today.

The appraisal schedules listed assets of $1,389,509, against obligations of $1,727,858, of which $1,670,815 were debts.

Schwab whose name and the word "steel" were almost synonymous for decades, started his career as a grocery boy in Braddock, Pa., and climbed up the rungs of the steel industry until his fortune was estimated as a high as 450 million dollars. During his lifetime he contributed to charitable and educational organizations.

FWA Pays Nursery Installment

The Federal Works Agency yesterday forwarded $8500 to the Commissioners as the first installment of the promised $13,000 for the operation and maintenance of a child care center in the 300 block of D Street Southeast. The Commissioners turned the money over to the Board of Education, which is to manage the seven-house day nursery for the children of working mothers.

Besides the balance of the $13,000, the FWA has promised $14,700 for the renovation of the houses, and $77,000 for 20 other day-care schools and nurseries. However, the Commissioners have been notified definitely only that they will get the $13,000. When all of the projects are completed, 800 children will be given day care while their mothers are at work.

The Commissioners regard the establishment of the nurseries as experimental, because the FWA grants only account for half the operating expenses of the centers. The other half is expected to be collected in fees from the mothers.

Navy Gunners First to Get 'E' For Excellence

The Army-Navy Production Award, which is being presented today to the John McShain and A. Hamilton Wilson organizations and their employes, is the outgrowth of an old Navy custom.

Beginning in 1906 the Navy permitted crews of guns which had made high scores in target practice to paint large "E's" on their turrets. This practice resulted in so great an improvement in gunnery that it was later extended to other departments of ships' complements.

Extended to Shipyards

Following awards to gun crews, Navy "E's" were given for excellence in engineering and communications, with the same results in improved performance that were gained in gunnery. Finally, when production of ships for the Navy was speeded up after war began in Europe in 1939, it was decided to give the "E" for excellence to shipyards.

After Pearl Harbor the award was extended to all classes of manufacturers doing business with the Navy. When the Army later wished to reward its producers for excellence, an agreement was reached between Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal and Undersecretary of War Patterson whereby a joint "E" award was established which might be given by either service or both. This arrangement forestalled duplication of awards and possible confusion.

Burgee and Buttons

When the Award for Production is made, the firm is given a burgee bearing an "E" which it may display in its offices or fly from its flagstaff. At the same time, all employes of the firm are given silver "E" buttons to show that their efforts have won an award for their firm.

While "E" awards have been made in a large number of cases, only about 1½ per cent of organizations doing business with the Army and Navy have received this coveted recognition of proficiency. It is regarded on the production front very much as the Distiguished Service Medal is regarded on the fighting front.

Fire Escape Inspections Due Next Week

Reexamination of the fire equipment of 1780 rooming and apartment houses whose proprietors were warned last week of prosecution for operating without a license will be conducted next week by policemen and fire inspectors, the Commissioners ordered last night.

Preliminary to the rechecking, Police Department licensing officials and Fire Marshal inspectors will be instructed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas that they are to determine and report if the lodgings are being operated without a license, or if the number of guests has been reduced below the minimum number, four, which requires licensing.

This instructional meeting was outlined by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, who has been instructed by the Commissioners to prosecute all proprietors who are in violation of the licensing regulations. This action, if carried through as inflexibly as the Comsioners ordered, could cause the eviction of between 8000 and 10,000 tenants of places found to be in violation of fire regulations, especially of those prescribing the necessity for fire escapes.

Building Inspector Robert H. Davis said last night that the general hearing on rooming and apartment house problems, promised worried proprietors, would probably not be called until a tentative set of rules has been worked out.

Dies of Gun Wound

Mrs. C. B. Brown, 58, of Columbia, S. C., died yesterday at the Washington Sanatorium, Takoma Park, Md., as the result of a pistol shot wound in her left breast, which the Montgomery County medical examiner said was self-inflicted.

Military Road Bus Service Begins May 9

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered the long delayed and debated Military Road crosstown bus line to begin operation on May 9. At the same time it ordered a rush-hour shuttle line from Tenley Circle to Ward Circle to start Monday serving employes of the Naval Communications Center at the old Mount Vernon Seminary.

The Military Road line, much shorter than the present H-2 crosstown line, will operate between Wisconsin Avenue at Western Avenue and the Fourteenth Street-Colorado Avenue bus terminal. From the Wisconsin Avenue terminus, the route will go east over Western Avenue and McKinley Street to Thirtieth Place, thence south to Military Road, thence east over Military Road and Concord Avenue to Fourteenth Street and south to the Colorado Avenue terminal. The western trip will exactly reverse this route. Headway on the new line will be 15 minutes on the base day schedule.

One bus will serve the shuttle line to the Naval Center, making four trips at 10-minute intervals just prior to 8 a. m. and just after 4 p. m. This bus will be diverted from the regular Massachusetts Avenue line.

In order to get the Military Road line past the restrictions of the Office of Defense Transportation, which last month banned a similar crosstown line for Loughboro Road, the PUC ordered runs on the existing Crosstown line curtailed by 250,000 bus miles per annum. This will be accomplished by maintaining a 15-minute headway, and by operating turn-back service on the inner portions of the line at Tenley Circle, Park Place and Seventh Street and Michigan Avenue and wherever else the traffic makes possible.

Cafe Boycotted In Arlington Naval Annex

Navy employes in the Arlington annex of the Navy Department yesterday launched a boycott of the building cafeteria which spokesmen said would expand until conditions of which they complained were corrected.

Luncheon sales in the cafeteria yesterday were 10 per cent under those of the previous Friday, according to Capt. Frank W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, which operates the lunchroom. Hoover said, however, that no formal complaint had been made to him and that he was not aware of any cause for dissatisfaction among the cafeteria's customers.

Employes' Report Differs

"We have had no message or representation from any one," he declared. "I have no idea of what the trouble is, except for some unofficial rumors which have been so conflicting they can't be accepted as valid complaints."

In contrast to the cafeteria record of a 10 per cent loss in luncheon sales, spokesmen for the employes said that instead of the "usual 3000 for lunch they had only about 250 yesterday."

Attention of employes to the projected boycott was called by an unsigned petition circulated through the building. This petition set forth a list of grievances and suggested that the cafeteria be not patronized until conditions were corrected.

Among complaints reported by an employe spokesman were these:

Servings are meager, often the meat consisting of a single slice of Canadian bacon, men are served more than women.

Meals are not well balanced, vegetables and meats not being varied sufficiently from day to day and food poorly seasoned. A balanced lunch in the cafeteria, the spokesman said, would cost 45 to 60 cents.

Quality of meals has deteriorated in the last eight months, although prices were raised 5 cents a plate about five months ago.

Help improperly trained, leaving tables uncleared while standing about "holding bull sessions."

Rat-Catcher Lacks Permit, Lands in Court

Thousands of rats have given up their respective ghosts here within the last year or so but to the Health Department they are still scourging the city because their exterminator was not officially recognized, it was revealed yesterday in Municipal Court.

John S. MacAboy, president of the Exterminating and Control Service Co., 418 H Street Northeast, told Judge Walter Casey that when he took his business over a year ago he was not aware that it was necessary to register with the Health Department.

"We have been killing rats very ambitiously," MacAboy said. "As a matter of fact, we have killed about 1500 every week. The main thing is to kill the rats."

Further, Isador Feldman, who operates a poultry market at 1255 Fourth Street Northeast, told the court that MacAboy had made his life worth living by exterminating "rats so large that I had to flee the store around 6 p. m. every night when they began to move about."

Judge Casey suspended a find of $25 dollars on the charges and MacAboy promised to get a permit.

Montgomery Charter

Washingtonians are still watching with interest the progress of our neighbors in Montgomery County in modernizing their local government. The promising movement set in motion last year recently brought forth a tentative draft of a charter. The Montgomery County Charter Board is now giving the public a chance to criticize its handiwork and to make suggestions before the final draft of the proposed charter is submitted to the county commissioners before May 3. That is wholly in keeping with the democratic and progressive character of the new setup which the board recommends.

We have not yet had the privilege of examining a copy of the proposed charter. But most of its provisions, as outlined in the press, have the earmarks that are usually associated with efficient administration and democratic home rule. A council of nine would become the county's legislative body, one being elected from each of the five commissioner districts and four at large. Both county-wide and local views would be reflected in such a body. It would have obvious advantages over the larger policy-making body recommended in the Brookings Institution study.

Administration would be entrusted to a county manager responsible to the council. County functions would be carried out through centralized departments under the general supervision of the county manager. This arrangement has proved its worth in both business and governmental organization. Much depends, of course, upon the wise selection of the county manager. But the council-and-manager system, buttressed by a strict merit system for the selection of employes, at least gives officials efficient tools to work with. And that is of inestimable importance.

To offset this centralization of local power the proposed charter would permit some important questions, such as the issuance of bonds to pay for improvements, to be referred to the voters. There seems to be little or nothing that is novel in the proposed charter. But the drafting board has borrowed ideas from some of the best systems of local government now operating in the United States. Perhaps some flaws will show up as the public carefully examines the charter or as it is later put to the acid test of actual operation. Its authors are to be congratulated nevertheless in producing a general plan, which, if approved by the voters, should give Montgomery County more efficient and responsive government than it has had in the past.

OWI's Job

Doubtless, in the light of the statement of the resigned writers in OWI, Mr. Elmer Davis will explain his comment at his press conference on Wednesday. Mr. Davis said that the resignations were due to a "clash of personalities much more than of principles." The writers say that a principle is vitally at stake—the principle of honest factual reporting. This seems to be the case, since the men and women involved have been invited to reconsider their resignations. The principle at stake is basic to the functioning of OWI. Only if the pamphlets issued by OWI are honest and truthful can they be tolerated as coming from such an organization. Surely the core of the complex and difficult assignment faced by the OWI is to give the American people an understanding of the problems they must overcome in order to win the war and gain an enduring peace. If all that OWI can give is ballyhoo, as the writers say is the policy, then it is better not to put out such publications at all.

In point of fact, OWI has issued some pretty good pamphlets. The report on the combat performance of American aircraft was illuminating and cleared up a lot of confusion. A survey of the extent of drinking in Army camps dispelled much needless anxiety about the habits of our young men in uniform, though, of course, not all anxiety, since there are some black spots in the picture. More recently OWI's study of the effect on the Nation's health of the current shortage of physicians threw light on an important aspect of the manpower problem. And there have been a number of other instances of honest, factual reporting to the people.

This work has been of value to both people and Congress, and helpful to other Government departments on the operational side of warmaking. The Government, indeed, could profit greatly from comprehensive reviews of its own shortcomings and of the problems it must solve. We have never, for example, had a detailed and straightforward report on the manpower situation as a whole. We have not yet been given a full, clear statement about our shipping losses. The inflation report was pretty tardy, and the lack of such spadework must have been very disturbing to the Office of Economic Stabilization. Nor has the public been provided with adequate preparation for the food shortages which have perplexed and irritated it in recent weeks. The current report is too stale to be useful, though the delay is due to the difference over policy which has now come to a head. Moreover, in the light of this dissension, this particular report may be branded as colored, as will all other succeeding reports.

Now that the Writers Division has had its say, OWI should make a statement on its pamphlet policy. Is the series to be wound up? If not, on what system are they to be written, ballyhoo or information? The demarche of the Writers Division will impair the prestige of OWI in the eyes of the people as long as these questions remain unanswered.

"Who Made The Law?"

Mr. Robert Kuenze, president of the New Jersey Pretzel Co., wants to know who made the law that compelled a young woman in his employ to cease bending pretzels and return to her former job of sewing pockets on Army and Navy shirts. Mr. Robert Goldberg, head of the shirt company, who recaptured the errant worker by lodging a complaint at the regional offices of the WMC, has an answer. He thinks "there's a law that says an employe can't quit war work for nonessential industry." But Mr. Goldberg is wrong. There is no law requiring or permitting the "freezing" of workers in war jobs, but only an executive order for which no legislative authorization has been asked or given.

We hope Mr. Kuenze will insist upon an answer to his question: "Who made the law?" That wish is not based on any conviction that pretzel bending is as important as sewing pockets on Army shirts, although the issue is debatable. But repetition of the question would serve to publicize the need of a comprehensive legislative plan for mobilizing the country's man (and woman) power. The restless young woman who took to pretzel bending because she was "used to the wide-open spaces" and "didn't like sitting-down jobs" is a fitting symbol of the intellectual confusion that has resulted from the manhandling of our war manpower problem by Mr. McNutt.

Civilian Supply

Donald M. Nelson was advised to set up a strong agency to represent civilian interests during the early months of our war effort. Instead, former Price Administrator Henderson became Director of Civilian Supply on the side. Later the Office of Civilian Supply was taken over by Joseph L. Weiner. But it has accomplished so little, through lack of WPB support or otherwise, that Mr. Weiner himself is now pleading for a strong independent agency to bolster up our sagging civilian economy.

The appointment of Arthur D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., as vice chairman of the WPB and Director of Civilian Supply is thus a very belated reform. It comes, moreover, at a time when Congress is considering the establishment of an independent civilian supply agency outside of the WPB. Is Mr. Nelson now determined to give the maintenance of essential civilian industries the attention it deserves? Or is he merely trying to head off a bill designed to cut into his authority?

Undoubtedly an independent director of civilian supply would represent this particular section of the public interest more ably than a director subordinate to the WPB. But if Congress should begin chipping off bits of authority from the WPB, there might be no end to the process. We hope, therefore, that Mr. Whiteside will be permitted to assume the responsibilities of a real spokesman for civilian interests within the WPB and thus achieve a better balance between military and civilian supplies without setting up another czar responsible only to Stabilization Director Byrnes or the White House. In the absence of any war cabinet the multiplication of little czars directing different segments of the war effort may be just as dangerous as WPB's blind spots. In the circumstances we think that Senator Maloney ought to sidetrack his bill to create an independent office of civilian supply and give Mr. Whiteside a chance to right the balance within WPB.

Farm Fight

Abolition of the Farm Security Administration, as recommended by the House Appropriations Committee, would signal the complete domination of the Department of Agriculture by the point of view of the large commercial farmers and by the Farm Bureau Federation which speaks for them. Nothing so clearly demonstrates the Farm Bureau's identification with commercial farming interests as its long and bitter hostility to FSA. The Farm Bureau, it should be remembered, has exerted its very considerable political power to wreck the anti-inflation program. Its advocacy of the Bankhead and Pace bills was designed to raise farm prices with complete disregard for the national economy. Its opposition to incentive payments as a means of encouraging production reflects a callous lack of concern for the welfare of small farms.

Whatever its errors or excesses, the Farm Security Administration is needed to give the United States a balanced, comprehensive program of food production. More than any other agency of the Department of Agriculture, FSA has helped and befriended the small subsistence farmers, the family farms of America. It has sought to give a measure of independence and dignity to the otherwise disinherited little men of agriculture—the cotton choppers, tenant farmers, sharecroppers and migrant workers. The productive abilities of these people must be fully utilized if we are to achieve the mammoth harvests of food necessary to win the war and determine the character of the peace. It is a scandal that this year we face a decline in food production.

A major portion of the country's food comes from large commercial farms. These are already operating at, or very close to, their peak efficiency and productivity. But there are some four million farm families whose gross income in 1940 amounted to less than $1500; half of these grossed less than $600. Their productive potential has by no means been realized. It can be harnessed to the war effort only if the small farmers are given Federal aid in the form of funds for equipment and fertilizer and in the form of technical aid and supervision. Another urgent task is to help the small farmers to switch from nonessentials like cotton to essentials like peanuts and soya beans.

These forms of assistance FSA is peculiarly equipped to render. Its activities in the midst of war should be directed exclusively to just such war-related functions. It must forget some of the social theories which have confused its purposes in the past. It must operate strictly as a war agency to mobilize America's rural manpower as effectively as possible for the maximum production of that quintessential weapon of war and peace, food. Congress can best promote this purpose not by abolishing FSA but by streamlining it.

Coal Solution

The proposal for a guaranteed six-day work week, submitted to the stymied conference of mine workers and mine operators by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, affords a reasonable basis for the settlement of their differences. It is in no sense violative of the President's latest anti-inflation order, since it would neither increase the wage rate of the miners nor raise the price of coal. Yet it would somewhat improve the miners' weekly earnings by lengthening the number of hours they work each week. And it would probably result in an enlarged production of coal vitally needed for the war effort.

This arrangement would merely transform a theory into a fact. In theory the coal mines operate on a six-day week now. Indeed, some months ago, at the request of Harold Ickes in his role as Solid Fuels Coordinator, the Office of Price Administration raised the ceiling price on coal so that operators could meet the increased labor costs of six days' work with time-and-a-half payment for the sixth day. The purpose of this was to enlarge the output of coal. Not all of the mines, however, shifted to a six-day week, although all of them did pocket the increased price for the coal they produced.

In view of this situation, it is not easy to understand the operators' refusal even to consider Miss Perkins' proposal as a basis for negotiation. The fact is that the operators have steadfastly refused to consider any proposal save a return to the status quo. They have advanced no suggestion of their own for achieving an agreement with their workers.

John L. Lewis, while accepting the proposal, successfully obscured its real nature by referring to it as guaranteeing 52 weeks of work a year and providing his miners with a daily increase of $2.25. To such terms the operators could reasonably object. Actually the miners would get nothing more than an increase in their weekly earnings commensurate with the extra work they would be called upon to perform. This may save Mr. Lewis' face—a consideration in which not everyone will rejoice. But it will scarcely make him a hero to organized labor. Nor will it represent any yielding to his noisy defiance of the Federal Government.

If the attitude of the operators continues, the War Labor Board will have no recourse but to take jurisdiction over this case and compel a settlement. It has refrained from doing so thus far out of a healthy desire to give the conflicting parties every opportunity to reach a solution through collective bargaining. There are, of course, other issues involved besides the matter of wages. These may prove too thorny for conciliation. If so, the WLB must arbitrate them. Coal production cannot be interrupted.

Hemisphere Cooperation

By Virginia Prewett

Holds Public Interest

THIS YEAR'S Pan-American Day, April 14, has underlined a highly significant development in inter-American relations—the fact that the interest in hemisphere affairs that was becoming so marked among the American people in general during the two years before Pearl Harbor has increased rather than lessened since then. From this can be inferred the answer to the most important question in inter-American relations today. This question is whether or not the United States, after the war, may shift attention from the hemisphere scene and permit the New World cooperation that has been so laboriously built up in recent years to fall into neglect.

The American people's interest in Latin America is vital to this question because under our system only the understanding and support of our people in general can guarantee that our official policy of cooperation will continue. The Nazis argue that we are a people who know little and care less about foreign relations except when danger threatens. In 1941 and early 1942 this writer heard fears on this score expressed by Latin Americans themselves in a dozen countries. Recently, however, speakers and writers in Argentina, Peru, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Uruguay, Venezuela and Mexico have begun to say that the people of the United States, not just the leaders, are behind the hemisphere idea and that public interest here is national, nonpartisan and above all a snow-balling movement. Facts amply bear this out.

To illustrate, Pan-American Day has been observed by Pan-American societies and like groups in this country ever since it was first designated in 1930. In 1941, for the first time a whole town, Greenfield, Iowa, marked it with parades, exhibits, addresses. National women's organizations, cooperating with the coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, agreed to initiate similar community programs and a test was made in Toledo, Ohio, in 1942. Public response was so enthusiastic that the American Municipal Association suggested the plan to its scores of members for 1943. Over 100 towns and cities promptly asked for the blueprint.

New York and Miami staged elaborate programs this year. The mayors of Chicago, Los Angeles, Baltimore, St. Louis, Cleveland, Phoenix, Tulsa, Corpus Christi, Memphis, Denver, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Birmingham, Oakland, Calif.; Waterbury and Hartford, Conn.; Lancaster, Pa.; Minneapolis, Galveston, Buffalo and Tacoma issued proclamations that set community observances on foot. Civic clubs, women's clubs, schools, newspapers, radio stations, business houses, chambers of commerce, theaters, all joined in.

The coordinator's office filled 125 requests a day for Pan-American Day material for a period of six weeks before the date. The Pan American Union filled over 5000 in the same period.

Interest is not centered exclusively on Pan-American Day but is decidedly a year-round proposition. Women's professional, social, business and study clubs with a combined membership of 12 million began to feature Latin-American study in 1942. The U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Clubs, the American Library Association, the National Educational Association are other Nation-wide organizations that are emphasizing hemisphere affairs this year.

That the approach is serious and practical is shown by the fact that requests for detailed factual information about Latin America are coming in to the coordinator's office at the rate of 1000 each month. The U. S. Office of Education is filling an equal number. The Pan American Union is filling an average of 2500 paid and free orders, an increase of 25 per cent over last year. Almost all orders go to groups of people.

Organizations with special interest in foreign affairs are acting at regional centers to facilitate adult study of Latin America in Denver, Des Moines, Chicago, Cleveland, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Boston, Providence, R. I. Others are being set up in Philadelphia, St. Louis, Kansas City and Detroit. Information centers, headed by field representatives are operating in 27 cities in 22 States and the District of Columbia.

Centers that distribute films on Latin America in cooperation with the coordinator's office now exist in 61 cities in 42 States and the District. To show what this means, 33,500 people attended 136 showings arranged by the center at Rochester, N. Y., in two recent months.

Twelve colleges and universities held public forums on Latin America in the scholastic year 1941-42. Sixty-five in every State will do so this year. Over 10,800 people attended one held by the University of Boston from March 13 to 15. The University of Rochester, with 70 civic and women's clubs, attracted as many people to a forum held on January 26 and 27.

Of 179,034 foreign-language students in the United States, 82,688 took Spanish in 1941-42, an increase of 27 per cent over 1940-41. This year study of Portuguese went up 172 per cent. Adults are crowding Spanish classes. On April 7, Texas announced that all State schools will begin to teach conversational Spanish from the third grade. New Mexico schools teach it from the fifth grade and study in grade schools is spreading through other States. This is a movement that will make Americans bi-lingual.

All these activities mean that Americans old and young are learning about our Latin-American neighbor nations. There has been no popular movement like it in our country's history. It promises that neither today's voters nor tomorrow's will be either indifferent or uninformed on our relations in the New World.

There's Never Enough

By Barnet Nover

Limited Output; Unlimited Needs

AMERICA'S production of planes, ships, tanks and guns has increased enormously in the 16 months since Pearl Harbor. But there is not enough today and, regardless of any future rise in war production, there never will be enough to supply all the fronts with all the weapons the Allied commanders deem necessary to insure victory.

As long as the war remains one of global dimensions, therefore, we shall be plagued with the insoluble problem of how to satisfy an unlimited demand out of a limited supply.

IN HIS RECENTLY published book, "We Can Win This War," Col. W. F. Kernan argues that any dispersion of our strength is wrong and can prove disastrous.

Thus he regards the Tulagi operations of last August, which led to the capture by American forces of Guadalcanal, as "futile, wasteful, wholly unnecessary." And our landing in Africa was, he declares, "Guadalcanal all over again," since it has involved an expenditure of strength along the periphery of Axis power that should have been employed in an assault on Europe.

His prescription for victory is "to strike Hitler strategically anywhere," with every ounce of strength we can muster now and without waiting to accumulate overwhelming force.

What should be done about Japan at this stage Colonel Kernan does not specifically say. It is not clear whether the author of "Defense Will Not Win the War" favors clearing out of the Pacific altogether or merely maintaining the minimum defensive strength in that theater to keep Japan at bay.

ON THE OTHER HAND, there came into being after Pearl Harbor an equally vociferous school which took the position that the road to Berlin ran through Tokyo, since Japan, being weaker than Germany, could be disposed of more easily. It was argued, furthermore, that if Japan were allowed sufficient time to consolidate her position and exploit the vast gains she has made she could make herself invulnerable.

Actually, the strategy which the United Nations, and particularly Great Britain and the United States have pursued since Pearl Harbor has been a compromise between the all-out-against-Hitler and the all-out-against-Japan schools of thought, with the emphasis on Germany as enemy No. 1.

THIS COMPROMISE was the result of the complicated interplay of innumerable factors—tactical, political, logistical—but rested at bottom on three dominant considerations.

The first was that for an indeterminate period the Allies had no choice but to remain very largely on the defensive both in Europe and in the Pacific. This meant giving Russia every possible aid to enable her to withstand the Nazi onslaught. It meant securing the British bastion. It meant holding Egypt and strengthening the defenses of India, Australia, New Zealand. And it involved the defense of the supply route to the South and Southwest Pacific.

Inevitably, therefore, the bulk of our outgoing supplies had to be earmarked for the European theater.

The second consideration upon which our strategy has been based is that it would be far more dangerous, from our point of view, to give Hitler a prolonged breathing spell while we concentrated on the defeat of Japan than it would be to give Japan time to consolidate her position and exploit her gains while we concentrated on the defeat of Hitler.

Japan's conquests have given her access to vast raw material resources, particularly oil, tin and rubber, but has only indirectly made possible an expansion of her industrial plant. But, if Hitler is allowed sufficient time to exploit the industrial resources he has acquired through conquest Germany would be very hard to beat.

The third consideration was that we had, at all costs, to prevent a junction between Hitler and Japan and a consequent pooling of the industrial strength of Axis Europe and the raw material wealth of the Japanese empire.

This again brought aid to Russia, the defense of Egypt and India, the strengthening of Allied garrisons in the Middle East to the fore as well as made necessary such incidental operations as the occupation of Madagascar and the establishment of an American base in Eritrea.

THERE ISN'T the slightest possibility that the basic strategy which the Allies have so far pursued will undergo any radical alteration. But circumstances may, from time to time, permit or even demand a reconsideration of the division of supplies among the various fronts.

This is the meaning of the clamor from the Southwest Pacific for more war materials, particularly planes.

On the one hand, General MacArthur is obviously and understandably impatient to get ahead with the war on Japan and to exploit the qualitative superiority in the war which our fliers and planes have demonstrated. On the other hand, there is the fear that if we do not quickly build up our strength in the Southwest Pacific the Japanese will take advantage of our weakness to drive us farther south.

There is every reason why within the broad framework of existing strategy the demands of General MacArthur and the Australian leaders, and also of the Chinese, should be given the most sympathetic consideration. And there is every reason to believe they will.

Capital Levy

Most of our income tax difficulties can be taken care of by a pay-as-you-go plan except for the savings of the relatively few individuals who provided in advance for current income tax payments. These savings seem to disturb some of the Treasury folks and some of the men on Capitol Hill. Apparently, the entire muddle and mess is due to the attempt to confuse the income tax problem as such with the desire or even the necessity for levying a tax on such savings as there may be. That seems to be the fundamental difficulty.

Now then, granted we need every dollar of tax payment we possibly can collect, it seems about time to face the issue squarely and "call a spade a spade" as we loudly proclaim that we always do (and never do).

The answer appears to be simply this:

No. 1—Collect the income tax at the source, beginning July 1, and continue thereafter forevermore.

No. 2—Enact a special tax on savings over a certain minimum amount so that those "fabulous sums" which presumably have been saved up to pay taxes will really be caught.

In other words, if we are going to make a capital levy, let's make it and say so, but for heaven's sake, let's quit trying to camouflage that step by cooking up a complicated dodge which we call an income tax to hide it!

HERBERT WACHSMANN.

Ruml Windfalls

As a reasonably stalwart Republican who was originally taken in by the Ruml plan, but recovered from the disease, I should like to present a few points that seem to have been overlooked in the recent discussions:

1. The need for more revenue.

2. The necessity of stopping inflation right now. We will continue to have higher and higher prices and wages until it is made plain to everyone that the Government will not permit money to be spent freely in futile pursuit of a standard of living no longer attainable. At this late stage the only way to make this plain is to take the money.

3. The windfalls under the Ruml plan, which may not be entirely unconnected with the high-pressure backing it enjoys. These arise from the fact that high-income taxpayers are usually prudent, canny men, who have been operating their own pay-as-you-go plan for years. J. Randolph Dough, who gets $30,000 per year, does not wait until March, 1943, to do something about his 1942 income tax, like Joe Broke, $3000-a-year carpenter, does. No, sir. J. Randolph knew darn well what was cooking in Washington, and he started right in in January, 1942, to lay aside $1000 a month as a reserve for taxes. He missed a couple of months, because he had to stock up on some things that were getting scarce, but when he balanced his books on January 1, 1943, he found he had well over his $10,000 tax liability set aside. So he kissed it goodby and started setting aside some more out of his 1943 income to meet his 1943 taxes. So far as he was concerned, that $10,000 was owed to the Government, and it was as good as gone, until he read about Mr. Ruml's plan, which would let him keep the $10,000. Then he wired his Congressman, phoned an editor friend and started passing the word.

Let's have an end to this business of forgiving taxes Let's put an end to coddling the public, and to this phony prosperity. Let's start sopping up this surplus money that is bidding up prices, and let's start raising the revenue this war requires. SHYLOCK.
Arlington, Va., March 27.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Postwar Woman

"In all this postwar planning," said Elmer Twitchell today, "one important angle is being overlooked. Nobody is planning the postwar woman. And if we don't pay some attention to her, we men folks are going to have a lot of trouble."

"What do you mean 'planning a postwar woman?'" we asked.

"Just what I say," Elmer replied. "With woman going into this World War to the very limit and taking on duties and responsibilities conceded to belong to man up to now, a lot of things are going to happen to her. We won't know her when she comes out. And we'd better start planning to keep her under control."

Elmer was quite disturbed. "Up to this war woman was linked pretty generally with beauty, frailty, charm, household duties and reasonable docility. She's coming out with a dry skin, an Army haircut, bulging muscles, an air of efficiency and an ability to do most anything. If you think she's going to show even a faint trace of docility you're gooney!

"We always associated her with moonlight and roses. If the war lasts long enough we'll be associating her mainly with bombing planes and rivets.

"She went into this war with silk stockings, daffy hats and costly corsages. She's coming out with leather boots, steel helmets and a complete set of monkey wrenches.

"The idea that man was a superior being, alone capable of any thinking and real work, was shot to pieces years ago, but up to today he has continued to be looked up to with a little awe by the girls. They left roof repairs, road construction, ship building and war to him anyhow. And he always had to change the tire.

"But before this war is over the women are coming into their own as never before. They are discovering every day that they can do anything a man can do. And they are finding out that a lot of it wasn't as mysterious or as hard as we cracked it up to be.

"They're as much at home with a sledge hammer, riveting gun, lathe, tire-jack or block and tackle as they used to be with a rumba record, an orchid or a night club reservation. Nothing a man does looks hard any more.

"And the longer the war lasts the more indecent, self-dependent, muscular and resourceful they'll get. I tell you we men should start some postwar planning about women."

"What would you plan?" we asked Mr. Twitchell.

"I'm very much afraid we'd better plan to do the housework," Elmer concluded.

It is just possible that when he sent his men to take that Tunisian city General Montgomery said, "No rumors; all I want is Sfaxs."

Tourists and others in Miami are using some great excuses in their demands for supplemental gas to get back home. But tops is the fellow who is reported as arguing, "I've got a big God Bless America tag on my car, and when I drive home it will be a morale-building trip."

Since food is so scarce a man feels guiltier than ever when he is seen on the street with a toothpick.

Time For Gardening

Since the Government has asked all of us to grow a victory garden I feel it should assist us in every way possible to make the garden productive.

We in the Government are required to work eight hours a day, six days a week, including holidays, and therefore have very little time, especially where we are required to go to work at 9 o'clock and get off at 5:30, in which case it is 7 before dinner is over, with little or no time remaining for gardening.

I therefore propose that the Government change the hours of those who start at 8:45 and 9 to 8 or 8:30, thereby giving an extra hour or half hour in the evening for gardening. I suggest that, if the bosses and others who belong to the elderdown or rocking-chair brigade cannot get to work at these hours, we who are desirous of helping the Government by a victory garden be permitted to start our day at such earlier hours and help win the war.

Milk Prices

It is interesting to note from today's Post that Mr. Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, has had "very few" complaints about Washington restaurant prices.

Nearly every Washington restaurant except the large cafeterias now charge 10 cents for a half pint of milk.

That's plain profiteering.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Hot Spot At Hot Springs

THE TROUBLE over admitting the press to the coming Food Conference at Hot Springs may be traced back to the President's effort to combine two desirable but incompatible things. One is to have a meeting in which all the United Nations are represented. The other is to have the meeting be as efficient for making plans and taking decisions as, let us say, his meeting with Mr. Churchill, or with Mr. Eden, or even as the sessions of the Pacific War Council.

LIPPMANN

The President, in other words, is trying to have a large mass meeting act as if it were a small executive committee. His method of accomplishing this impossible thing is to bar the newspapermen in the hope that there will then be a secret mass meeting. It cannot be done. If it is a mass meeting, it cannot be secret: it will leak news in all directions, and it is, therefore, a mistake to exclude the responsible and trained correspondents. If, on the other hand, there are matters which have to be dealt with secretly, as in wartime there may well be, then it is a mistake to call a great advertised international conference. For secret matters the ordinary channels of diplomacy and of the inter-allied boards are ever so much more efficient.

THERE IS a problem here to which it is not easy to see an altogether satisfactory solution. It is the very old problem, raised to the international level, of how to combine the advantages of wide representation and open deliberation with the need for prompt, decisive action. The tax bill in this Congress exemplifies the problem. The country needs a tax bill, and it needs one quickly; Congress has the power to enact a tax bill. But since Congress is composed of over four hundred men with no one to lead them and no one whom they will follow, Congress has been unable as yet to legislate. It is difficult for a mass meeting to plan and decide: it can rarely do much more than to say yes or no to a proposal laid before it. Yet taxation without representation, taxes levied by anyone but Congress, is tyranny.

Now among the United Nations, the initiating and the executive power is in the chief belligerents—Britain, Russia, China, and America. But the alliance includes many other nations, and they are not only entitled to representation but their presence is needed to check, balance, and guide the action of the great powers.

THE COMING Food Conference is, it would seem, much less concerned with food than it is with testing out the machinery for the representation of all the United Nations. By trial and error we have to devise a way by which many nations can play their part in affairs, and the only way to find a way is to try it out and see how it works.

We have already found out something of first-rate importance. We have found out that a large international conference cannot be run like a small confidential meeting of a few responsible men. This will remind us, though we really all know it from experience in any organization, that we cannot entrust great and difficult decisions to a mass meeting. If we wish to hold an international mass meeting, and on the whole there may be something to be said for holding them occasionally, the difficult and contentious questions will have to be negotiated in advance through the regular diplomatic channels, and then published, explained, and ratified in the large gathering.

IF, for example, the Hot Springs conference were thrown as wide open to the press as a political convention, there would happen just what happens at a political convention; the key delegates would meet in a hotel bedroom. If the correspondents were all invited to come to live at the hotel, the key delegates would soon be meeting in some private home, or perhaps even back in Washington.

If we must not suppose that the President can have a secret mass meeting, we must not suppose either that there can be a public mass meeting which really makes the difficult decisions. In so far as it is a mass meeting, it cannot be held secretly. Because it is not secret, the public deliberations will not be important.

THERE HAVE been a great many international conferences in the past 20 years. Experience shows, I think, that they are useful only if, before they are convened, the interested governments have reached an agreed program. The big meeting is useful to give public sanction to the agreement, to provide opportunities of personal contact for officials from many countries, and to make sure that the formulae in which the agreements are stated are tactfully and wisely worded.

But that is just about all that great heterogeneous international conferences are good for. And if they are designed for more than that, if they are designed to find the answer to great unsolved problems, they usually do more harm than good. The Paris Peace Conference and the Washington Arms Conference are examples of what to avoid. Both were great, mixed, confused gatherings trying to decide momentous questions which could only have been decided well by thorough and quiet negotiation carried out before the delegates and the newspapermen crowded into the hotels and began to mill about the lobbies, the dinner tables, and the bars.

Ship Delay Feared

WPB Meeting Today

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

A special meeting to discuss changes in steel plate specifications was scheduled for today by WPB as a result of developments which yesterday led WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson to take action against reportedly serious declines in steel plate production arising from recent exposure of fake specification records.

The meeting was announced immediately after Nelson made public the text of a telegram which he sent to all steel plate mills in the country urging producers to "avoid the danger of delaying the entire program by a blind, unthinking insistence on unattainable perfection."

The telegram, it was learned, was drawn following reports that production had dropped by as much as 50 per cent following disclosure March 23 that the Truman Senate War Investigating Committee had obtained evidence of falsification of records covering inspection of steel plate at the Irvin (Pa.) plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, a United States Steel subsidiary.

Drop Believed 20-30%

While admitting that the declines were "certainly serious," WPB officials were inclined to believe that 20 to 30 per cent more nearly represented the drop in production.

First concerted action "to do something," it was said, developed within the last three days when keymen from some of the larger steel plate producing mills "laid the facts" before Nelson.

As a result, Nelson immediately had the telegram composed and asked that a meeting with steel experts be held right away to avert serious trouble in the production of the vitally-needed plate.

The trouble arose, it was said, when plant inspectors became fearful of even passing plates that fell slightly below specification, thus cutting deeply into production.

Extraordinary Vigilance

Nelson, in his telegram, said, "I am, of course, aware that since the recent disclosures at the Truman Committee hearings, both industrial and Government inspectors in every plate mill in the land have been more than usually vigilant.

"It is proper that they should be so, of course, and I have complete confidence that there will be no repetition anywhere in the industry of the kind of thing disclosed before the Truman Committee.

"But it is equally important that the volume of steel plate produced and shipped be maintained, and over-rigid inspection practices could easily defeat that end."

He pointed out that 100 per cent uniformity is rarely attainable and that naval architects' specifications are drawn with an ample margin of variation. He warned that the whole program could be "crippled" by insistence on rejecting plates for minor variations that did not interfere with the serviceability of the steel.

At today's meeting, it was said, will be representatives of WPB, steel plate mills, War and Navy Departments, Maritime Commission, and the American Bureau of Shipping.

In connection with the Irvin plant disclosures, company officials told the Truman Committee that the faking was not known to the "higher management" and that no one profited. It was merely, officials declared, a desire on the part of employes involved to maintain high production.

District Relief Boosted

House Group Hears Of Family Needs

Stung by newspaper criticism of their four-year policy of putting "ceilings" on the amount of support allowed for families on relief in the District, the House Appropriations subcommittee yesterday authorized the director of public welfare to make more adequate provision for the indigent.

At the appropriation hearings, released when the District appropriation bill was reported out yesterday, Commissioner Guy Mason told the committee that at present the District may only pay out $24 to the head of a family, with $6 a head per month for each child.

"It does not make sense," Mason said, "You cannot rent a room for $24.

"Here is a man lying on his back with arthritis, and his wife is tubercular. They have three or four children. You cannot stop those kind of people from having children. You have a family of six living on about $60. No family in the world can live on that now."

In reporting out the appropriations bill with the ceiling lifted, the committee stated that "it has done so with the reservation that the administration of public assistance money will be studied and investigated fully when the estimates for the fiscal year 1945 are considered.

"The committee charges the Commissioners to share in the responsibility of imposing administrative ceilings on direct relief and watch carefully for successful and economical distribution of the funds. The bill provides that no part of this appropriation shall be expended in such a manner as to require a deficiency to supplement such appropriation."

New Health Inspection Setup Asked

Concerned over reports in The Washington Post of insanitary conditions existing in the District, the House Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday recommended a reorganization of the inspection service in the Health Department.

The committee said that it will "look with favor" on a formal request for funds for a supervisor of inspections.

"It is felt by the Commissioners that this function of the Health Department is not working as efficiently as it might, and as a result it is not using its available personnel to the best advantage. It was suggested that a supervisor of inspectors was needed to control the over-all work of the inspectors and to attempt to merge the functions and capacities of individual inspectors so that the personnel would be more versatile," the committee said.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer had told the committee that the effective operation of his inspection service was jeopardized by a loss of personnel and by difficulty in getting trained personnel. He said his department was doing everything possible to protect the health of the city.

D. C. Discards Less Garbage, Xanten Finds

Evidence that District housewives are becoming increasingly thrifty in their use of food was presented to a House Appropriations Subcommittee in a report released yesterday.

"We find that housewives are gradually cutting down on the amount of garbage they put into the garbage pail," William A. Xanten, supervisor of city refuse, told the committee.

Xanten said that despite the tremendous increase in the population here there was no greater amount of garbage to collect, but added that since the conversion of oil heaters to coal burners, the ash problem has become a heavy one.

Xanten's testimony revealed the fact that the District receives $59,241.48 annually from the sale of grease collected by the refuse department, and $10,000 from the sale of prepared tin cans for detinning.

be appointed by the President.

3. Addition of 125 additional policemen to the Metropolitan Police Force, with the specific suggestion that new men be used to patrol outlying sections where policemen now have beats of from 70 to 80 square blocks.

4. Recommendation of reorganization of the Health Department's sanitary inspection service, with the statement that a request for funds for a supervisor of inspections would be "looked upon with favor."

5. Approval of an item of $503,000 for purchase of eight sites for school buildings to be constructed after the war.

6. Authorization of a study of fire and casualty insurance rates in the District, which the committee considered "too high as compared with loss experience." Change in rates can only be made through legislation, the committee pointed out.

7. Raising the rates the Commissioners can pay various hospitals for the care of indigent patients from $2.09 per day to $3.50 a day, and for clinical service from 50 cents to 75 cents.

8. Provision of $5000 to pay convalescent patients at Glenn Dale, Md., in any "essential work" they might perform. The hearings brought out that Glenn Dale, seriously handicapped by nursing shortage, might be able to employ patients who were nurses and were convalescing.

9. A cut of $22,100 was made in funds sought by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to purchase new traffic equipment, with the suggestion that under present traffic conditions the department could save that sum by eliminating unnecessary traffic lights during certain hours.

10. The bill permits public school teachers to earn extra money during the vacation period by working from July 1 to September 15, 1943, in any Federal department or agency.

11. The committee cut the estimate for Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm from $315,810 to $299,560 because of a decrease in inmates but recommended a dietitian be engaged.

Chief slashes in the estimate were in personnel, and in municipal improvement projects which could not be carried out because of the war. In regard to manpower, the committee asserted that in the field of personnel in the District government "there is a fertile field for retrenchment."

Hull Assails Gearhart

The Trade Pact Row

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull, denying hotly that reciprocal trade pacts contribute to war, said yesterday he would label the charge 100 per cent piffle if anybody but a Congressman had made it.

Hull told a House committee Monday that Representative Gearheart (Republican) of California was "headed straight down the gulch of extreme nationalism" with his contention that other nations had taken undue advantage of the treaty program. Yesterday the Secretary discussed at his press conference Gearheart's later statement that "instead of promoting peace, this program has contributed to war."

If a Congressman were not the author of that statement, Hull asserted he would call it 100 per cent piffle. The record shows that Germany began early in the 1930's to rob every foreign nation of any properties and monies inside Germany, Hull, said, beginning with the seizure of about $1,200,000,000 of American holdings.

From that she went on to expand her operations of robbery and plunder to finance her armies, he said.

Germany always had the opportunity to resume the role of an honorable nation, he commented, but had done every imaginable violation to any idea of fair treatment among nations.

Gearhart is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, now considering legislation to extend the treaty program beyond its June expiration date. He has accused the State Department of "encircling Hitler" by writing treaties with surrounding countries.

Tom Linder, Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture, appeared before the committee yesterday to denounce the trade agreements as "but one cog in the wheel of unlimited internationalism which is intended first of all to crush the American farmer."

Continuation of the trade program was advocated today at the annual meeting of the Academy of World Economics. Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, who presided at the opening meeting, declared the policy should be continued "not only on the basis of its merit, but particularly as an indication of our intention to cooperate in freeing world trade of restrictions in the postwar era."

Dr. Nourse is director of the Institute of Economics of the Brookings Institution.

Eight Welders Accused Of Sabotage

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 16.—Eight Baltimore shipyard welders were accused today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of sabotaging vessels being built for America's war effort by doing faulty welding to earn money faster.

However, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said at Washington that there was no evidence of "any Axis direction or sympathies on the part of the welders."

Six of the eight, all but two of whom were arrested in Baltimore, pleaded innocent when arraigned and were held under $5000 bond each for further hearings April 22 before a United States commissioner.

Another Bethlehem-Fairfield welder, arrested several weeks ago on a similar charge, was convicted of sabotage yesterday in Federal Court. He was George Arnold Steele, 20, formerly of Franklin Furnace, Ohio. Sentence was deferred until Monday.

All of the eight whose arrests were announced today had been discharged, some of them only a short time before being taken into custody.

Each of the men was charged specifically with "slugging" or "bridging," a speeded up piecework operation resulting in increased pay but producing inferior seams.

Hoover said "many of the improper welds were in vital parts of the ships and were only discernible through the use of X-ray.

The two arrested outside Baltimore were Harley Brastus Miller, 22, arrested at Lexington, N. C., and Wilfred James Gossman, 24, arrested at Zanesville, Ohio.

One Sparrows Point yard employe charged was James B. Dixon, 25, of Baltimore, native of Portsmouth, Va. The others, all Bethlehem-Fairfield workers, were:

Hiram Thomas Via, jr., 22, native of Basic City, Va.; Herman Scherer, 26, native of New York; Raymond Ashby Burkholder, 28, native of Buchanan, Va., who was discharged from the Navy for misconduct in 1932; Farrell Houston Smith, 29, native of Catawba, N. C., and former resident of Gastonia, N. C.; Leonard Lucas, 24, native of Greenwood County, S. C.

The Gallup Poll

Americans Find Meat Hardest to Cut Down On; Coffee Is Second, Gasoline Third in Survey

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 16.—Of all rationed products, the one which American families find it hardest to cut down on is meat.

That is what a representative cross-section of the population from coast to coast told interviewers for the Institute in a survey this week.

The second thing people find it hardest to give up is coffee, and the third is gasoline for their automobiles.

To representative families in all sections, interviewers put the following question:

"Which of the things now rationed do you find it hardest to cut down on?"

The largest number promptly answered "meat," and this perhaps should come as no great surprise, since a survey in February, before meat rationing went into effect, indicated that among the middle and upper economic groups 92 per cent ate meat, fish or poultry daily, and among the lower economic group 85 per cent.

Here is the order of the items named by Americans as hardest to cut down on:

HARDEST TO CUT DOWN ON

1. Meat
2. Coffee
3. Gasoline
4. Sugar
5. Butter
6. Canned goods
7. Shoes
8. Fuel oil
9. Tires
10. Cheese

It is interesting to note that shortage of favorite food items concerns people more than lack of non-food products. Among the first six items all but one are food items.

That is undoubtedly because shortage of food affects everyone, whereas restrictions on gasoline and tires directly affects only those families owning automobiles, and shortages of fuel oil is felt only by the households who heat with oil. They constitute about one-sixth of the total.

The fact that shortage of gasoline seems to bother fewer people than other shortages provides interesting confirmation of a survey which the Institute conducted among car owners more than a year ago. This revealed the startling fact that one-half of all car owners said that if necessary they could give up their automobiles without undue hardship.

While the hardship caused by gasoline rationing varies according to areas, it is noteworthy that the country as a whole places gasoline only third in importance in today's poll.

Restoration of Wage Power To WLB Asked by C.I.O. Group

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Asserting that the present wage policy "will neither secure stabilization nor promote production," the C. I. O. members of the War Labor Board yesterday advanced a demand that Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes restore to WLB its previously held power to grant increases to remove gross inequities or to aid in the successful prosecution of the war.

Meanwhile, Administration officials expressed confidence that issuance of the President's price-wage order had made a workable compromise possible in the coal mine dispute between John L. Lewis and the country's soft coal operators, although they acknowledged that the order was fast getting them in trouble with the rest of organized labor.

In the Lewis case, it appeared that the Administration was firmly behind Secretary of Labor Perkins when she made her proposal that the case be compromised by an agreement for a guarantee of six days work each week. This proposal was accepted by Lewis, but rejected by the operators. It was learned that Miss Perkins reviewed her plan with Byrnes before she announced it publicly.

Further Evidence

Further indication that the Administration is behind the proposal was found in the statement by Thomas J. Thomas, associate deputy solid fuels coordinator, made in Cleveland yesterday, that the coal mines of the country must operate continuously throughout the year to provide enough coal to meet war-expanded requirements.

President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. and President William Green of the A. F. of L. were reported to have seen Byrnes yesterday to present their case for altering the new wage controls.

Living Standard Fear

The two union leaders were said to have informed Byrnes that organized labor objected to implementing this new program piece by piece.

The C. I. O. opinion in the cement company case commented on "the futility of attempting to force our wage economy into a straight jacket."

"The board must not, if it is to continue to make a significant contribution to the effective prosecution of the war, succumb to the feeling that it is no longer possible to take an affirmative and creative approach to the solution of wage problems," the C. I. O. members said.

"It is the positive duty of this board, arising out of the fact that no other agency has so complete an insight into the country's wage problem, to impress upon the director (Byrnes) the necessity of issuing policy directives which will permit the correction of gross inequities in wage rates.

Guard of Morale

"Only by such a course will the deterioration of morale be prevented. Only by such an approach will the board successfully perform its most important functions."

Earlier, William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, in a telegram to Robinson in Denver and leaders of the strike in Universal, Pa., branded the walkout as "a strike against the President's executive (hold the line) order and the Government of the United States."

"The leaders of American labor and the War Labor Board face a common purpose to protect the value of the wage earners' dollar and at the same time hold to a minimum all avoidable or gross inequities," Davis said.

Bust of Garner Is Unveiled In Capitol as He Tends Farm

By the Associated Press

While former Vice President John Nance Garner tended his Uvalde, Tex., farm nearly 2000 miles away, dignitaries gathered yesterday in the Capitol to unveil a marble bust of him to be placed in a niche outside the Senate chamber where he presided for eight years.

Fellow Texans joined in the ceremony held in the Senate reception room adjoining the vice presidential office Garner had occupied from 1933 to 1941.

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas and Secretary Jesse Jones paid tributes to Garner, after the veil had been lifted by Bascom Timmons, newspaper man. Senators Connally and O'Daniel, Texas Democrats, and Roy Miller of Corpus Christi, also participated.

Speaker Rayburn recalled that Garner, first as Speaker of the House and then as presiding officer of the Senate, "had power, and he exercised that power fearlessly," and to the "best interests" of the Nation.

Secretary Jones declared Garner had "left a mark in his public service that will endure," but that it was Garner the "delightful friend and congenial companion" that he cherished. Jones described the former Vice President's political philosophy as a "broad liberalism founded within the basic American traditions."

Connally observed that "with rare energy and indefatigable patience, he served upon committees and devoted his abilities with diligence and perseverance to public questions. He steadily rose to a position of prestige and standing."

Senator O'Daniel, in a brief talk, said:

"The rugged individualism, inherent honesty and brutal frankness of John Nance Garner of Texas are the characteristics which carved for him an important niche in the history of the greatest nation on earth."

The bust was the work of James Earle Fraser, Minnesota-born sculptor, and is to repose in one of a series of niches reserved for the likenesses of former Vice Presidents. Garner is the only Texan ever to serve as Vice President.

Vatican Aids Families With War Messages

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

More than 80,000 messages between families and civilians in countries at war, civilian internees and war prisoners, have been cleared through the local offices of a new Vatican Information Service, it was disclosed yesterday. A number of the messages involved local residents.

According to attaches of the Apostolic delegation, clearing-house for messages on this side of the Atlantic, the Vatican service is open to all nationalities and religions, and is free.

The service at present extends only to American prisoners held by Germany and Italy, but delegation officials said efforts are being made to include Japanese-held prisoners, too.

Students of Catholic University's religious houses are volunteering to assist in the message-clearing task.

An Apostolic delegation staff member said a similar exchange-message service was carried on in the last war through the Vatican.

While the message-exchange services of the Vatican Information Service and the American Red Cross parallel each other, they are cooperative.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States, is in charge of the information service at the delegation offices, 3339 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Dollar Continues Dip in Argentina

Buenos Aires, April 16 (AP).—American dollars declined again today in terms of Argentine peso in local foreign exchange markets, continuing the trend that resulted from a scarcity of United States goods available for purchase with dollars.

Social Disease Cases Here Set Above 40,000

Most prevalent of all diseases in the District of Columbia is venereal disease, with a conservative estimate of 40,000 cases, Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, in the House Subcommittee on Appropriations in hearings details of which were made known yesterday.

Dr. Ruhland told the committee that because the War Production Board had refused priorities for a detention hospital at Gallinger for venereal cases, there now are 23 women in a highly infectious state and some male patients, who should be "institutionalized and withdrawn from circulation," but were allowed to go free because there was no place to put them.

Representative Coffee (Democrat) of Washington, upon learning that Lanham Act funds had been granted for a venereal disease hospital only to have WPB refuse the materials, remarked, "It seems to me you are being badly treated."

BEW Is Intrigued by Pants Taken From Nazi Sub Officer

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Board of Economic Warfare is looking into a pair of fancy pants—right off one of Der Fuehrer's U-boats . . .

They're the waterproof jeans of a German submarine officer who was taken prisoner by the Navy during an engagement in the Mediterranean, and BEW is giving them the double-O in an effort to learn from them something of how things are going economically in the Reich.

They're a mighty swanky pair of britches—made of chrome-tanned sheepskin leather—and BEW estimates that they'd cost $30 to $40 in this country.

Government experts cannot say whether all the U-boat bosses are still rating such finery, because there is some evidence that the pants were made back in '39—before Germany would be expected to feel the pinch.

However, the pants perusal will be continued on the chance that more thorough investigation may show evidence of the use of substitute materials, new chemicals for waterproofing, or any indication of careless, apathetic workmanship among Hitler's pants makers.

One thing is certain—the sea raider who wore the pants did plenty of sitting. They're well-worn aft, but there is nothing to indicate whether this wear was caused by concentrated study at a periscope station or from playing pinochle.

The pants now bear the painted letters "P" and "W"—"prisoner of war"—but otherwise they show that their wearer was a fastidious gent. They're a little greasy and grimy, but there's scarcely a scratch or a tear on them.

But he definitely was a pessimist:

There's a total of 12 suspender buttons, in addition to a pull-belt in the back!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 16.—One of the missing items of the Yankees' 1943 files is the signed contract of Frankie Crosetti who is conducting a holdout squabble with the club that is at least unique.

Crosetti is yelping, from his California home, about the figures in the contract the Yankees have offered him. It provides no pay for the first month of the season, because Crosetti is under 30-day suspension by Judge Landis for what happened in the 1942 World Series.

POVICH

What happened in the 1942 World Series was that Crosetti, playing third base, was so angered by the umpiring that he committed the high crime of pushing an umpire. At the conclusion of the series, Landis slapped a $250 fine on the infielder and suspended him for the 30 days of the 1943 season.

Crossetti doesn't mind paying the $250 fine, but he is squawking about being payless for the first month of the season.

The loss of one month's pay to a ball player is equivalent to the loss of two months' pay in other industries. Ballplayers are paid on the basis of six months' work. In other words, a ballplayer drawing $12,000 a year, as Crosetti probably was, is not paid at the rate of $1000 a month for 12 months, but on the basis of $2000 a month for six months.

Crosetti's claim is that when he drew the ire of Landis, he was not in there playing for Frankie Crosetti, but for the Yankees. He was fighting for a decision for the Yankee team at least as much as for himself. Now the Yankees are disclaiming all responsibility and are trying to duck out from under what he calls their duty to pay him for the entire 1943 season.

True enough, the Yankees will not have the benefit of Crosetti's services until May 21, but there does seem to be an obligation to put Crosetti on the payroll nevertheless. The Yankees teach their ballplayers to scrap for everything they can get from the umpires, which was exactly what Crosetti was trying to do. They don't condone pushing an umpire around, but if a ballplayer can get away with it, there is no complaint by the Yankees. Because Crosetti didn't get away with it, the Yanks are ducking out on him.

There would probably have been no salary argument with Crosetti if the incident had happened a couple of years ago. Incidentally, then, it was important to keep Crosetti happy. He was a regular on the Yankee team. But Crosetti has been riding the bench as a substitute for two years. He has lost one of his great bargaining points.

Add the Yankees to Buck Newsom's hates. Buck would like to see the Yankees win the 1943 pennant. "So I could beat their ears off in the World Series," he was saying today, if the Yankees are in the World Series, they will be playing Brooklyn because Newsom will pitch the Dodgers into the National League pennant, of course.

Specifically, Newsom has a hard nose for Joe McCarthy, Manager of the Yankees.

"Can you imagine what that McCarthy said to me after I shut the Yanks out for five innings the other day?" demanded Newsom. We couldn't imagine it, so Buck told us.

"I was going to the dressing room through the Yankees dugout when McCarthy says to me, he says, 'You didn't pitch long enough to work up a thirst, did you Buck?' How's that for an insult."

Newsom is still reiterating that he is the highest-paid pitcher in baseball. "I made $20,000 last year, and I'm making more than $19,999 this season," he says, "besides I'm getting a chunk out of that picture M-G-M is making called 'Whistling in Brooklyn.' Me and Red Skelton are the stars."

Bluege Figures Nats As 1st Division Club

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, April 16.—Manager Ossie Bluege took a look around the American League today from his upholstered seat in the hotel lobby and opined that his Nats would do all right.

Newark weather put the chill on the scheduled game with the Bears today, and Bluege spent some of his leisure making out a case for the Washington Club this season.

"I'll be surprised if we win the pennant," he said, "but I won't be surprised if we finish in the first division. We're a tougher club than they credit us with, and the league is a lot weaker than last year.

Every Team Hurt

"Every team in the league has been hurt by the draft, but we haven't taken such a hard rap. We got ours when they took Travis and Lewis away from us before the 1942 season. I think we're the only team in the league that is as strong or stronger than last year.

"The Yankees won't win as many games as they did last year, and you can say the same thing about the Red Sox, Indians, Tigers and Browns. Somebody will win the games those clubs lose, and we figure to get a lot of them. I don't think there are more than three clubs that can finish ahead of us."

Bluege is no less than delighted with the manner in which his ball club is attacking, particularly in the power department. "There won't be an outfield in the league that will outhit Bob Johnson, Stan Spence and George Case," he declared. "There may not be a lot of power in our infield, but I like the possibilities," said Bluege. "I know Mickey Vernon and Gerry Priddy will hit, and Johnny Sullivan and Ellis Clary aren't push-overs for any kind of pitching. Jake Early can't do worse than last year, and right now he's acting like the best hitter on the team.

Bluege's chief fears are confined to his pitching department with the definite question mark, in the absence of tangible proof, that his rookie talent can win in the big leagues.

Pyle, Haefner Hold Hopes

"After Dutch Leonard, Early Wynn and Alex Carrasquel, I don't know where I stand in pitching," he said. "I'm hoping that the left-handers, Ewald Pyle and Mickey Haefner, will come through for us. If they don't, we'll have to be one of the real power clubs of the league to break even."

Tomorrow, Bluege sends his athletes against the Giants in the first of a two-game series at the Polo Grounds . . . Early Wynn and Alex Carrasquel are scheduled for their final tune-up before the season's opening . . . The weather in New York today gave Wynn an idea . . . he embarked on a shopping trip that netted him one suit of 100 per cent wool underwear, and separated him from eight bucks for same . . . The Nats met an old teammate at their hotel, Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, who is now with Brooklyn . . . the day wasn't a complete loss for the Nats . . . After traveling to Newark and discovering that the game had been called off on account of cold weather, they spent the next two hours working out in the Newark park.

Jamaica's $25,000 Race Draws 12 Derby Eligibles

By the Associated Press

New York, April 16.—They're going to ask Count Fleet and 11 other Kentucky Derby eligibles a mighty important question in the $25,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica tomorrow.

Upon how The Count and his rivals answer the question of speed and stamina in the mile and one-sixteenth race, only major Eastern trial for the Derby, depends whether or not they'll board a train for Churchill Downs and the $75,000 turf classic May 1.

The record books and betting odds say The Count should cakewalk home in the silks of Mrs. John D. Hertz. He was the champ of the 1942 2-year-olds. He burned up the track all spring in morning trials and then came out last Tuesday to turn in an easy victory over a sloppy mile and 70 yards at the Long Island oval.

As the result, he'll probably go postward at odds as short as 1 to 2 and if he isn't winging out in front at the judges' stand look for a big groan from those who have knocked him down to 4 to 5 in the Derby future books. That's the shortest prerace price in Derby history.

Cofeature Races To Gallant Witch, Favored Sollure; 'Tom Klakring Day'

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., April 16.—With war relief getting the profits, Maryland's abbreviated racing season opened with a bang here this afternoon. Official figures showed that 10,415 customers saw the program and wagered $429,527, some $3000 more than on opening day last year. The crowd was a growing one. Several thousand fans came to the track after the fourth event and admission tickets were sold until the last event got under way.

The day's action, which began at noon, was completed as scheduled, the final race being off at 3:32 in keeping with the request of Government agencies to have the Pimlico streetcar crowd away before Baltimore rush-traffic hours. A check of the parking lots showed about half the autos for a similar day last year.

Klakring Honored

The eight-race program was named "Tom Klakring Day" in honor of Lieut. Comdr. Thomas B. Klakring who was in command of the United States submarine which sank more than 70,000 tons of Jap shipping and who witnessed racing on the coast of Japan while the sub was awaiting action. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Klakring, his parents, were guests of honor.

Washington and Baltimore were represented in the victories that marked the day's cofeatures. Jockey Danny Scocca, District boy rode M. J. Angello's Gallant Witch to a nose triumph in the Wake Island Purse while Sollure, owned by H. G. Bedwell, of Baltimore, galloped home by six lengths in the Batan Purse. Gallant Witch was a $32.70 shot and Sollure rewarded the favorite players with a mere $3.90 mutuel.

Sollure With Ease

In the Wake Island, Scocca took Gallant Witch to the front early in the six-furlong test. In the stretch, H. L. Straus' New Moon, the favorite, moved up and there was a nip-and-tuck battle through the final straightaway with Scocca having the edge on Jockey Paul Kieper, aboard the public choice. New Moon a Kentucky Derby hope, was ahead of Mrs. H. W. Jackson's Ariel Patrol.

Sollure appeared worthy of every dollar wagered on his chances in the Bataan. The colt went to the front at the break and Porter Roberts had little to do except guide thereafer. Sollure was under heavy wraps at the end with G. H. Bostwick's Dimout second and the Flamingo Farm's Baby Darling, third.

Tentative Dates For Maryland Tracks

Baltimore, April 16 (AP).—Tentative dates giving Maryland 73 days of racing next fall were announced today, with the longest run—25 days—going to Laurel.

Track owners and State racing commissioners approved these dates tentatively:

Havre de Grace, September 4-24; Laurel, September 25 to October 23; Pimlico, October 25 to November 6; Bowie, November 8-27.

Havre de Grace and Bowie passed up their regular spring meetings this year because of transportation difficulties, while Laurel always had concentrated its racing dates in the fall.

Hernandez Outclasses Alexander at Uline's

Washington Boy Easy Victim and Suffers Rude Jolt in Fistic Rise; Decision Is Unanimous

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Carroll (Kid) Alexander, local featherweight who had high hopes for national prominence following his eight-round victory of Joey Archibald last week, last night found he was trying to take in a little too much territory as Pedro Hernandez, with a minimum of trouble, easily cuffed his way to a unanimous eight-round decision over the local boy at Uline Arena.

It could hardly be called a contest, so thoroughly did the Puerto Rican outclass the local featherweight. Pedro won every one of the first six rounds, twice had Alex on the canvas in the fifth, and then was contented to coast along to victory. Alexander made his best showing in the seventh and eighth heats when Hernandez, with the decision safely tucked away, was contented to protect his lead. Alexander weighed 122 against the 126 for Hernandez.

Pedro demonstrated a vicious left hook that completely baffled Alex. He threw it with abandon and connected plenty. As early as the fourth he obviously had Alex suffering from those ripping shots to the body that stung. It wasn't until late in the seventh that Alex was able to connect with any sort of a telling blow, and then it was too late.

In the fateful fifth that sealed the doom of the local boy, Alex stepped flush into one of those hard lefts and went down. At eight he was up, but still heavy-eyed and went down again a few seconds later when the Puerto Rican connected lightly, but was saved by the bell. He had trouble finding his corner.

Marshall Is Upset

Johnny Kapovich, 175, Baltimore soldier now with the Army at Greenville, Pa., provided a major upset when he slugged out a one-sided eight-round decision over Herbert Marshall, 182, New York Negro who is rated No. 10 among the country's heavyweights.

In three rounds, the fourth, fifth and sixth, Kapovich had the New Yorker ready for the trip to dreamland, but Marshall managed to hang on. Kapovich beat Marshall to the punches all the way with a stinging left, and also showed a hard punching right hand. Marshall was a 1 to 10 ringside favorite.

Lee Rosan, 147, Baltimore, was aided by six points as the result of low blows to take a six-round decision from Charley Bennett, District of Columbia Negro. Bennett appeared to have a slight edge, but the points he lost on fouls were too many to overcome.

Eddie Marcinko, 122, Baltimore, and Joe Camaretta, 116, Baltimore, fought a six-round draw, and Earl Wentz, 146, Baltimore, scored a three-round technical kayo over Vince Boniviri, 146, Washington, when Boniviri was unable to continue after the second round.

Rider Track Team Beats Wilson, Colts

Led by Donald Swann and Perry Varoutsos, Roosevelt yesterday eked out a 62-61 victory over Woodrow Wilson in a triangular track meet. Calvin Coolidge brought up the rear with 18 markers.

Swann took individual honors with 17 points, two more than the Tigers' Buddy Brewton. Varoutsos won the 100 and 220-yard dashes for ten points. The meet was not decided until the final event, the broad jump. The Riders led by four points, necessitating Wilson to take first, third, and fourth if Roosevelt took second to gain a tie. Brewton won the event and Johnny Colvin walked off with third. Swann annexed second but John Formit of Coolidge decided the meet by taking fourth and awarded the Riders the victory.

Stewart's 164 Concludes G.U. Golf Trials

Georgetown University's golf team trials were concluded with only five players completing 36-hole totals out of the 15 starters. Paul Stewart jr. added a second 82 yesterday at Bannockburn for a 164 total, second low.

The 163 scores of Jim Fitzgerald and George Bouchert, turned in Thursday, led the field with Joe Barse fourth with 165 and George Rita 167. All are local boys.

Dick Mulvaney, Casper, Wyo., city champion who is recovering from a recent illness, will be allowed to play his rounds at a later date. Jack Donohue, acting coach of the Hoyas and the logical No. 1 player, will not compete on the team due to studies and business.

G. W. Golfers List Seven-Match Schedule

George Washington University Athletic Director John Busick announced five additional matches for the Colonial golf team yesterday, making a seven-match schedule in all. The Colonials have played Navy, losing 8-1 last week, while a match with Loyola of Baltimore will be added.

G. W.'s linksmen will travel to Westminister to meet Western Maryland on April 23 and play Georgetown, May 1 at Bannockburn and May 12 at Kenwood. They will also meet Western Maryland at Kenwood May 5 and Johns Hopkins at Kenwood May 7.

Bronco's Pilot Jake, a hard-working pointer owned by S. G. Eareckson of Washington, won the All-Age Stake in the opening events of the annual National Capital Spring Field Trials yesterday on the Mount Pleasant Farm, Rockville.

Jake, handled by C. C. Fawcett of Washington, turned in some sensational work to beat out Beau Essex's Ace, setter, owned by V. P. Hawse of Staunton, Va.

Three setters swept honors in the Puppy Stake, Rodney Peerless Lou, owned by W. R. Carpenter of Harrisburg, Pa., taking first place. Equity's Whirlaway, another Hawse dog, placed second.

The trials will be concluded today with the Shooting Dog event, expected to last all day, starting at 8 o'clock this morning. Trophies will be presented the winning owners following the day's run.

Two new District A. A. U. women's swim marks were set last night at the Boy's Club Eastern Branch pool to feature the qualifying heats of the D. C. A. A. U. senior men's and women's indoor championships.

Blonde Jean Ort, Penn Hall team captain, inaugurated the record-smashing when she cut 3.4 seconds off Patsy Palmer's 220-yard free-style standard to win her qualifying heat in 2:48.0 and the Ambassador Club's Leola Thomas knocked over the 100-yard backstroke mark by nearly two seconds in capturing the trial heat in 1:17.2.

In the 220 Miss Ort took a lead at the starting dive, gradually extended her advantage throughout the eight laps and finished ahead of 13-year-old Pat Van Zile by a pool length.

Miss Thomas collected her new record almost as easily, taking an early lead and finishing almost half a pool length ahead of Shoreham's Margaret Stone Donato.

Surpassing in interest the District titular races tonight will be the men's and women's 50-yard free style competition for the junior national championships. These events have attracted a star-studded field of some of the outstanding A. A. U. Eastern Seaboard swimmers. OSCAR ELDER.

Cubs' Unearned Run Beats White Sox, 1-0

Base on Balls and Two Errors in Eighth Give Cubs Run Off Hurler Edgar Smith

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 16.—The Chicago Cubs made only two hits off three White Sox hurlers today but scored a run in the eighth inning without resorting to their bats to win, 1 to 0, before 2424 fans in Wrigley Field. It was the first 1943 appearance of the Chicago teams in their home town.

While Paul Derringer and Hirom Bithorn stood off the Sox batsmen with five well-spaced hits, the Cubs maintained the scoreless tie until the last half of the eighth inning.

Then Bithorn walked and was forced at second by Stanley Hack, veteran third baseman. With Rookie Eddie Stanky at bat, the wide awake Hack broke for second and Sox Catcher Mike Thresh's throw went into centerfield. Hack sped for third and when Centerfielder Thurman Tucker allowed the ball to roll past him, Stan came home with the only run of the game.

Five Crimson errors and 14 hits enabled the major leaguers to swell the lopsided score. It was the first time Harvard had met the Sox since 1916, when the collegians, with Eddie Mahan pitching part of the game, whitewashed the professionals, 1 to 0.

Dodgers Purchase Johnny Allen and Washburn of Phils

New York, April 16 (INS).—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced today they had purchased Johnny Allen and George Washburn, both right-handed pitchers, from the Phillies. It was a cash transaction but the amount was not revealed.

Allen, 37-year-old veteran, first came to Brooklyn from the Browns by the waiver route in July, 1941. He won three games for the Dodgers that year, and scored 10 victories against 6 defeats last season. He went to the Phils last winter in the deal whereby the Dodgers obtained Rube Melton, but refused to sign with that club.

Washburn, former member of the Yankees' chain, won nine and lost seven games for Newark last season.

Eastern Smothers Anacostia, 28 to 0, in Interhigh Series

Roosevelt, Tech Nines Win Easily

Eastern's 14-Run Outburst in First Sets High Record; Wilson, Western Bow

A trio of routs featured yesterday's interhigh baseball program. The biggest margin was Eastern's record breaking 28-0 victory over Anacostia. Dave Leonarduzzi held the Indians to four hits while his mates were gathering 21 off the combined offerings of Harry Swisher and Charley Breener. Roosevelt turned in a mild upset, defeating Woodrow Wilson 10-4 while Tech was winning over Western 10-3. Leigh Joy and his "butter-fly" pitch stymied the Wilson Tigers with only five hits. The Riders got 11 off of Stu Brown and Jack Ogle. Milo Quail throttled Western with seven bingles and his mates, led by Jack Walsh and Moe Friedberg rapped out 10 safeties.

Eastern in Walk

With a big first inning rally netting 14 runs Eastern had little trouble in coasting to its victory over the green Indians. Every man in the starting line-up except Leonarduzzi got at least one hit with Wilbur Osman and Edsel Martz setting the pace with four each.

Coach "Woody" Smitherman substituted freely, using almost everyone on the squad, but even the reserves added to the score Ernie David, big Tide first sacker, slapped a home run in the fifth for the longest blow of the day. Eastern had the honor of setting a pair of records which should stand for a long time. The total score of 28 markers tops the old mark as does the 14 runs in a single frame.

The Tide jumped on Swisher, Indian starter, for seven hits in one-third of an inning and his successor, Breemer for 14 safeties in seven-and-two-thirds frames.

Roosevelt Wins

Charley Howard presented Roosevelt with a 2-0 advantage in the initial inning when he poled a long home run into deep left-center fiield with Joe Johnson, who had singled, scoring before him. The Tigers went ahead in their half of the third when "Monk" Barbee hit a circuit clout with Billy Haycock on base. Wilson had tallied one in the second.

In the fourth the Riders went ahead for keeps. Ollie Kennedy walked, took second on Howard's bingle, and both runners moved up on Sid Brazin's well-placed sacrifice. Fred Kramer drove both men across with a sharp single to right. Roosevelt added two in the fifth when after one was down, Johnson singled and scooted to third as Kennedy doubled. Howard drew free transportation and Drazin drove a pair of runs home with a hit to left. The hosts added a trio of runs in the seventh and picked up another in the eighth.

Tech Wins Second

Tech tallied two runs in the first inning and was never headed to win its second series start of the week. Quail again went the route, being nicked for seven hits, four of which were gathered by Tony Buzzanca and Ray Love, Raider keystone combination. Quail allowed a run in each of the first two innings but then settled down and held Western in check for the rest of the tilt.

Dee Lampros, Western starting pitcher, was knocked out of the box in the second inning and Big Nathan Gould finished, giving seven runs.

Dear Al:

We chased the first daily double of the season home for the Benningites and that $34.20 kept the boys and gals in betting money for the afternoon. Don't be surprised if the Maryland fall racing season opens on Labor Day. I'm told the plan is to have 73 days of the sport in the fall. Few of the first flight jockeys were on hand for the opening day and boys like Buddy Root, Al Bocson and Patsy Frant had a chance to pick up some mounts. Today's program will be run in honor of Johnny waters who is now Lieut. Col. John Waters. He was born and raised in the nearby Green Spring Valley and was captured by the Axis at Faid Pass in North Africa. The choice of Ty Shea as the third steward at this meeting was good news to the horsemen. Shea is as well equipped for the job as any man in the State but apparently lacks some of the political pressure of other officials. The cold weather yesterday morning kept many horses off the track so trainers were allowed to work out their charges after the racing program. The number of autos at the track was about half last year for the same size crowd. Freddy Burton, racing secretary at Charles Town, has been made a steward at the Chicago tracks.

BILL.

First race—Nayr is a fair jumper and looks as good as anything in the opening event Air Marshall is a threat. Farefield should take care of the others.

Second race—Minstrella get in light and has speed. Looks like the right spot. Gun Site, a former Glenn Riddle speedster, could surprise. Annapolis Maid for the show end.

Third race—Elray turned in a fair effort in Naw York and belongs close with these juveniles. Middle River has worked well and will be dangerous. True American for the minor money.

Fourth race—Overlin has plenty of foot and needs only to be in shape to turn back these. Little Hoops packs top weight of 116 pounds but will be right there. Winning Smile to show.

Fifth race—Unchallenged went well at New Orleans and gets in light enough to defeat these. Mercury was a fast one last year and is working kindly. Cape Cod for the light end of the purse.

Sixth race—Cassis is said to be ready and seems capable of turning back this field. Star Copy is a handicapp mare but prefers a longer route. Kopla is a Derby eligible.

Seventh race—Golden Mowlee will like the route and should be in shape to account for the main portion of the purse. Colesboy always liked the track and is dangerous. Dingmans could be third.

Eighth race—Pete Gino and Miss Fix It went well in winter racing and should battle it out here No Ending belongs in the money circle.

Pro Jockey License Aim Of D. C. Girl

MISS JUDY JOHNSON

Women are doing all sorts of dangerous work now, from ferrying bombers to driving busses. Women are replacing men, for the duration at least, in many other lines of strenuous endeavor.

The manpower shortage has become evident at the race tracks and, if Miss Judy Johnson has her way, Maryland will have its first licensed woman jockey.

The clever Washington sportswoman yesterday made formal application, attaching the customary $2 fee, to the Maryland Racing Commission. If her license is granted—and only precedent stands in her way—Miss Johnson expects to begin taking professional steeplechase mounts this week.

Miss Johnson, who has been successful with horses as owner, trainer and rider, believes the war has opened this new field to women. "Many of our best steeplechase jockeys have been taken away by the war. I don't see any reason why girls should not be allowed to substitute for them," she said yesterday after she had filed the necessary papers.

At present she has four steeplechase horses, owned by T. T. Mott of Washington, under her care at the Laurel track, where she has been schooling them.—HAIGHT.

The Federal Diary

Government Girl Drive Is Spreading

EDITOR'S NOTE: Today and every Saturday the Federal employes express their views and comments through this column.

A real spirit carried the GOVERNMENT GIRL drive through the Division of Vital Statistics of the Census Bureau at Suitland, Md., and I'd like to see it duplicated in other Government agencies to further this patriotic gesture.

After the organized drive for contributions of $1 was completed, a second voluntary collection was made and the money collected was given in the names of employes who are now in the armed forces. Both campaigns were very successful. We all know that the 18 Vital Statistics employes now serving on the fighting fronts will be proud to know that their names have been added to those of their coworkers to be dropped, we hope, in the hearts of Berlin and Tokyo from our own GOVERNMENT GIRL warplanes.

We in Vital Statistics contributed to this drive not only in our own names but also in the names of our husbands, brothers, and sweethearts in the serivce. We're proud of the opportunity to buy planes to help blast the Axis. E. L. S.

Absenteeism is being attacked by the finance department of the War Department in an intelligent manner. The employes themselves have been asked to make constructive suggestions on what causes lost hours and I'm delighted to say that department officials are seriously considering them. Here are several of the employe contributions:

"The primary cause of absenteeism is the failure of supervisors to adequately sell the employes on the importance of and responsibility for their jobs. If each employe were made to understand the importance of his productive effort in the total job, no employe would permit personal inconveniences to stand in the way of full attendance and full production."

"Sick leave," said another employe, "in many cases is a farce for sheer laziness. Many keep bad hours and then want to catch up on 'old man slumber' by staying home and feigning illness. We must bear in mind that we are in the Army at the home front to help democracy." R. T. K.

GOVERNMENT GIRL

Buying a plane to send gifts to the Axis!
Sounds very funny, but its true,
And in order to do this, we need a dollar
No more, no less, from you and you.
If each and every Government worker
Will give a dollar as his share,
We may be able to buy two planes and send
One east, one west, and thus, be fair.
We are naming our plane "Government Girl"
Now isn't that sweet and coy?
But if we get two, what a pair it would make "Government Girl" and "Government Boy."
So, come on, you Government workers,
Get your dollar in fast as you can,
And soon our plane(s) will be winging away
With our gifts (bombs) for Germany and Japan.

VIOLA GARRISON, Treasury.

Many employes of the War Department have been called down for absenteeism in the past few months. All this is due to lack of sufficient time to attend to personal necessities.

It is therefore suggested that to prevent so much unnecessary absenteeism and sick leave, each employe be given one afternoon off every two weeks or at least within one month.

This program can be worked out in a manner which will not hinder the War effort. As a matter of fact, the war effort is being hindered more by this absenteeism than if employes were given one afternoon off during a period of two weeks or one month.

This suggestion would be acclaimed by many and would definitely reduce the rate of absenteeism and sick leave in the government. EMPLOYE.

4 Cabbies Taken After Vice Raid

Sortie Earlier in Day Nets 23 and 13 Plead Not Guilty to Charges

Four taxi drivers were arrested in various sections of the city last night as members of the vice squad continued to crack down on prostitution here. All four were charged with violating the White Slave Traffic Act and conspiracy.

Those taken into custody and charged were: Howard J. Wolfe, 44, 1615 Franklin Street Northeast; Pete L. Trainfillos, 30, of 226 Anacostia Road Southeast; Dennis A. Reardon, 35, of 735 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, and Fred E. Roberts, 28, of 1012 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Earlier 13 persons, six of them women, pleaded not guilty to vice charges and were placed under $2000 bond by Needham C. Turnage, United States Commissioner, following their arrest by Metropolitan police who raided the downtown hotel district early yesterday. The case has been continued until April 30.

Led by Detective Sergt. Roy E. Blick, 38 detectives gathered at the parking lot on L Street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest shortly after 2 a. m. Included in the group were Maj. Edward J. Kelly and Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, both in civilian attire.

The detectives swooped down on several places in the downtown district, including a hamburger shop, where a rookie policeman had been employed since February 20. The place was known by police to be the rendezvous for prostitutes and their procurers, including bellhops, cabdrivers and others.

The rookie said the women were using the shop as an operating base and he heard their procurers tell them, "I have a $10 date for you," or "a $20 date for you." The girls, he said, accompanied bellhops or cabdrivers, who found cheap rooms for them and their "dates."

When police arrived at the shop, the rookie cop, still wearing his apron, closed the shop and joined police in rounding up the men and women.

Twenty-three persons were arrested but five were released after investigation and five are being held for further questioning. Those charged with violation of the White Slave Traffic Act are:

Claud Outland, 52, of 723 Seventh Street Southeast, elevator operator; William Charles Glover, 24, of 1318 L Street Northwest, bellhop; Jack B. Tyrrell, 31, of 1008 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, bellhop; Edward R. Dixon, 23, of 2030 Perry Street Northeast, driver; Bernard G. McGoldrick, 32, of 947 Ninth Street Northwest, bellhop; Douglas R. Ward, 31, of 627 G Street Northeast, bellhop.

Charged with conspiracy against the White Slave Traffic Act are: Mildred Williams, 28, waitress, 2325 Fifteenth Street Northwest; Betty Lee Morrison, alias Betty Lee Scider, 30, 160 Thirty-fifth Street Northeast; Moira Rogers, 23, 1416 Chapin Street Northwest; Peggy Ann Brooks, 24, waitress, 1422 N Street Northwest; Jean Thompson, 26, clerk, 1333 Belmont Street Northwest, Apartment 21; Jacob M. Hankins, 48, salesman, 1829 M Street Northwest; Peggy Brown, 31, housewife, 923 Eighth Street Northwest.

In another raid case, Mrs. Carmen B. Martin, 28, of 1322 Fifteenth Street Northwest, pleaded not guilty to charges of violating the White Slave Traffic Act yesterday when arraigned before Commissioner Turnage and was released on $5000 bond. A preliminary hearing was set for May 4.

Mrs. Martin, not the Government employe of the same name, is accused of bringing a girl from New York to the District for immoral purposes. She was arrested by FBI agents Thursday night.

The raids followed a lecture by Major Kelly before 100 bellhops at police headquarters on the part venereal disease is playing in this war.

FBI Recovers Girl's Pocketbook By Fingerprints

The same FBI agents that can outshoot Dillingers and Bonnie Parkers can also retrieve pocketbooks, it was revealed yesterday.

They—an indefinite number—went into action April 13 upon hearing that Mildred Gummel, also of the FBI, had lost her purse, containing $111 in checks, in the FBI building cafeteria here. Scientific sleuthing in the cafeteria soon uncovered a sales slip that had been in Miss Gummel's purse. Fingerprints on the slip, agents said, were those of Andrew Coleman, 22, Negro, a cafeteria busboy.

Coleman pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and was held for the grand jury under $1500 bond.

Yesterday was a proud occasion for the Gichner boys—Lieutenant Jacob of the Navy, Sergeant Joseph of the Army and Private Bill of the Marines.

It was a proud day, too, for their father, Fred S. Gichner, who watched happily as the Army-Navy "E" pennant was hoisted over his iron works at 1214 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, and for their brother, Henry, who accepted the award for excellence in production, and then told the firm's 48 employes:

"This is just one pennant we've won. Now we're after the World Series. Let's keep right on going until we get the V-Flag for Victory!"

First in District

It was the first presentation of the "E" pennant to a commercial firm in Washington, and the iron works employes beamed with pardonable pride when Lieut. Comdr. A. J. Walden, speaking for the Navy, told them "that one product alone of the Gichner works is being installed on every destroyer afloat." Their motto, he said, in contrast to the "too little and too late" of early war days, appeared to be 'Enough, and on time!"

Major D. C. Thompson, U. S. A., read the citation which accompanied the award, "—enduring contribution to the preservation of the United States and to the immortality of human freedom itself," and presented "E" lapel pins, personally and individually, to each of the employes.

Harry R. Reynolds, his shirt open at the neck and wearing a leather jacket, spoke for the employes. A member of the wire department, he promised that he and his colleagues would "strain every effort to turn out more and more war materials" and see to it that the Gichner works would continue to merit the high honor paid it yesterday.

A Marine color guard from the Washington barracks raised the pennant, and the United States Navy School of Music Band, with Boatswain Ralph Mack conducting, played outdoors adjacent to the plant. Earl Godwin, radio commentator, was master of ceremonies.

All of the Gichner boys managed to attend, and everyone was profuse in extending congratulations to the family.

Victory Sidelights

Legion Chief To Present War Picture

Roane Waring, national commander of the American Legion, will arrive in Washington within the next few days after a 30-day tour of the North African battlefront, Legion officials announced yesterday.

Commander Waring will arrive at an undisclosed point and proceed immediately to the District where he will report to the War Department, a Legion spokesman declared. He will tell of his observations of the activities of American troops in the successive offensives on Tunisia at a public meeting in Constitution Hall Thursday, April 22, under the auspices of the American Legion.

Two Jeeps in Five Days

Wilson Teachers College completed a five-day jeep drive Friday and raised $2585.50, enough for the purchase of two jeeps and something over, it was reported.

Defense Benefit

A midnight show sponsored by the air raid warden's sector and zone posts in Zone D will be given tonight at the Savoy Theater, 3030 Fourteenth Street Northwest. The entire proceeds of the picture, "Always in My Heart," will be used to purchase equipment for the zone post.

Lean Menus Indicated For Weekend

Lean weekend menus face most of Washington as local dealers yesterday reported the total absence of shipments of potatoes and cabbage into the city. Poultry arrivals were one-third to one-half of normal.

The one car of Idaho potatoes which arrived on Friday had long since been spread as thinly as 10 cautious dealers could spread them, each with an allotment of 45 bags.

The mystery of the carload of Maine potatoes which "disappeared" Friday was clarified when observers reported seeing farmers loading them onto trucks—presumably to be used for seed.

Poultrymen said the city normally would use from 10 to 15 cars of poultry a week. With rationed meat requiring valuable and scarce red coupons, the demand here now is for about 20 carloads a week.

Last week only five cars arrived with prospects of even that number arriving this coming week very dark, dealers said.

The reasons for this shortage, dealers said, is the ceilings under which they must operate. They now stand to lose 3 cents a pound in the processing of chickens and if they met black-market prices to farmers they would lose from 5 to 8 cents a pound.

They reported no action by the OPA on their request for a boost of 2 cents a pound in the cost allowed for processing the chickens.

He estimated that 80 per cent of the dealers were without any chickens and said he had been able to fill only 15 per cent of the orders received as he tried to take care of old and regular customers.

Cabbage has been scarce for some time and from the failure of any cars to arrive yesterday, promises to get scarcer.

On another food front the National League of Fresh Fruits and Vegetable Dealers revealed they had reported to the local OPA five violations of black market regulations in the sales of fresh vegetables.

WPB Official Doubtful of Housing Aid

Materials Cannot Be Withdrawn From Projects Vital to War, McDonald Says

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

Construction of enough new housing to ease the critical situation in war-crowded Washington and other areas throughout the country will not be possible unless vital materials are withdrawn from projects necessary to the winning of this war, William C. McDonald, chief of the war housing staff of WPB's Facilities Bureau, declared yesterday. "And that," McDonald added emphatically, "just cannot be done."

The WPB official's statement broke sharply into a discussion on possible solutions to "Wartime Washington's Housing Needs," by representatives of Government and civic agencies who met to clarify "one of the most serious housing problems in the United States."

Present as speakers at the meeting, held at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, under the auspices of the Washington Housing Association, were Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, of the Senate District Committee, who presided as chairman; Commissioner John Russell Young, Edward E. Knott, area chief of Labor Utilization, War Manpower Commission; John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority; Coleman Woodbury, assistant administrator of the National Housing Agency, and McDonald.

Only Remedy in Sight

The only remedy in sight now, McDonald concluded, is the fullest utilization of existing structures and remodeling of substandard houses.

This viewpoint was challenged by a study made public yesterday by the Washington Housing Association, on "Housing Conditions Affecting Families of Low Income in the District of Columbia," which stated that no provision is being made for families put out of their dwellings to make way for remodeling operations. "There are literally no places for them to go," it said, and the results are worse overcrowding, lack of sanitation, and the disintegration of families.

In addition, the report showed, during the past 10 years 1144 structures in Washington have been demolished by the Public Buildings Administration to make way for Federal buildings.

20,000 Unfillable Applications

John Ihlder of the ADA said that the situation is aggravated by the fact that the Government's housing program makes no allowance for the immigrant population of Washington. ADA, he said, now has 20,000 applications for dwellings which it can't fill. However, Coleman Woodbury pointed out, the eligibility requirements for war housing have been considerably broadened in the past week. Employes in the service trades, like streetcar conductors and busmen, necessary to any war community, now have become eligible for war housing, he said.

The ADA suggested a four-point program, which was indorsed by Senator Burton. Te relieve the immediate shortage of dwellings in Washington, the ADA proposed that temporary trailers and barracks be built. For this and other necessary construction, it asked Congress for the five million dollar fund authorized but not provided by the congressional act which brought it into existence four years ago. To broaden the relief program, it asked the abolition of the in-migrancy restriction in Government planning. To remedy the widespread slum situation, it suggested a Housing Code which would force slum landloards to obey regulations. And now, it concluded, is the time to plan housing for the postwar period.

Injuries Fatal

Two Deaths Bring Traffic Toll to 24

Traffic deaths this year..... 24
Deaths this date last year..... 40
Total deaths last year.....108

Two persons died yesterday of injuries suffered in traffic accidents earlier in the week, bringing the city's toll to 24.

Harry Sanders, 49, of 1432 Girard Street Northwest, died at Emergency Hospital after he had been injured in a collision between an automobile in which he was a passenger and a bus at Twenty-second and C Streets Northwest Tuesday. Police said the automobile was driven by Raymond Gasper, 55, of 2445 Fifteenth Street Northwest, and the bus by Irving Sawtell, 29, of 3516 W Place Northwest.

The other victim was George W. Freeze, 54, of 207 D Street Northwest, who died at the same hospital of injuries suffered in a streetcar accident Sunday.

Freeze, crossing Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest near Thirteenth Street, was struck by an eastbound streetcar operated by James J. Geehan, 31, of 55 Allison Street Northwest. The Accident Investigation Unit report stated that no police action was contemplated.

Early Action To Clean Up Slums Sought

At a hearing on Capitol Hill yesterday the spotlight was focussed upon the need for immediate slum clearance in Washington if epidemics due to overcrowding and filthy housing are to be avoided.

The hearing was conducted by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of a subcommittee on public health of the House District Committee.

The committee heard Joseph H. Deckman, chairman of the housing and rent control committee of the Federation of Citizens Association, in a request that the Alley Dwelling Authority's permanent slum clearance program, choked off by lack of appropriation from Congress, be continued.

Deckman also denounced temporary war housing as being uneconomical and requested the lifting of the $6000 ceiling set by the War Production Board on private dwellings so that private builders could have a chance to construct for families in need of homes.

Situation Critical

Commissioner Guy Mason told the committee that the housing situation here was critical, that the Commissioners fully backed the request for continuation of the Alley Dwelling Authority's program, and that the real need in housing not being met here was for families in the low-income brackets.

He pointed out to Decknan that private builders in the District have never found it profitable to engage in providing extremely low-cost homes to replace slums, partly because of the steep price of land in the District.

Ihlder asked that the appropriation of five million dollars be approved by the Bureau of the Budget and authorized, but not appropriated by Congress, be appropriated this year so that the "hamstrung" slum clearance program might be resumed.

He also asked that the unexpended balances and current receipts of the ADA be restored. Because of an act of the Senate Subcommittee on Independent Offices last year, the ADA is required to turn these unexpended balances (from rents, etc.) into the Treasury, taking in its place only an annual appropriation of $12,000 while the balances and rent receipts amount to $54,071.36 annually.

Ihlder also asked passage of amendments to the Alley Dwelling Act, authorizing the ADA to borrow money from public or private sources using the ADA properties as security.

Would Take 20 Years

Asked by Chairman D'Alesandro to submit a postwar program, Ihlder declared that any slum clearance program would take 20 years for final success, and said that with conditions growing worse all the time it must start now if it is not to take longer than 20 years.

Ihlder said the postwar period will bring an inevitable weariness and hence postwar programs "must be inaugurated now while we are keen and alert."

Representative Sasscer (Democrat) of Maryland announced that he was going to introduce a bill requiring the maintenance of funds guaranteeing removal of temporary war housing in the metropolitan area. The fund would be created from rents, he said.

Navy Casualties Total 24,797

The Navy announced yesterday 14 casualities in Navy forces, including 3 dead and 11 missing. This brings to 24,797 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7122 dead, 4665 wounded and 13,010 missing.

Resumption Of D. C. Slum Plans Urged

Citizen Unit Asks Congress to Make Capital Critical Housing Area

Immediate resumption of permanent Alley Dwelling Authority slum clearance programs for the District in place of the present stop-gap temporary projects was urged yesterday by Alley Dwelling Chief John Ihlder, addressing the Park and Planning Commission, and by the Federation of Citizens Associations, forwarding to the commission a resolution sent to the House Appropriations Committee.

Ihlder, participating in an all-day discussion of postwar urban redevelopment, said that the time to do something about Washington slums was not after the war, but now.

The federation, in a five-point resolution, asked Congress officially to declare Washington a critical housing area, requiring all Federal agencies handling priorities and allocations of critical materials to make available materials and permits for the construction of permanent housing in the District.

The Federation did not limit its demands for permanent housing to the low-income developments, but asked that restrictions be lifted to allow the construction of moderate priced houses as a means of combatting the housing shortage here.

Comprehensive Plan

A comprehensive plan for legislation to effect postwar elimination of "blight areas" in large cities was offered by Alfred Bettman, Cincinnati planning consultant to the commission. Ihlder was in accord with the broad provisions of this plan, which goes far beyond the scope of the Alley Dwelling Authority, but he was insistent that the needs and responsibilities of the Alley Dwelling Authority were more immediate than the Bettman plan provided.

In order to put the permanent alley dwelling program back into effect, Ihlder said, it would be necessary for Congress to reappropriate funds for the Type One projects, which were dropped two years ago. Only $13,000 were appropriated by the last Congress for these projects, instead of the several millions that had been allowed annually before He also asked minor legislative amendments.

Would Cancel Ineligibility

Besides a return to the original housing program, the Citizens Associations asked Congress to eliminate altogether the limitation which makes persons who have lived in the District over a year ineligible for residence in the emergency housing projects.

The Federation also asked removal or moderation of the present building limitations so as to permit the addition of bedroom capacity to such units as are constructed, and so that additional sites, now unavailable because of covenantal and economic restrictions, can be utilized for housing construction. Specifically it requested the removal of the cost ceiling of $6000 and rental celling of $50 per month per room on new construction. The resolution said that houses would thus be built on many vacant lots where these limits now make building economically unsound.

The Federation's resolution pointed out that for permanent housing no more manpower would be required, and that critical materials would be saved, because tile and brick, locally produced, could be used instead of the critical lumber required for temporary houses.

The Park and Planning Commission yesterday also approved site plans for temporary developments at Naylor Road and Alabama Avenue Southeast and at Nicholas Avenue north of St. Elizabeths Hospital. The Naylor Road development will contain 60 units of one and two stories, and the Nichols Avenue one 164 units of two-story houses.

A boundary dispute between the Army and Navy at Bolling Field was settled by swapping two adjacent triangles, which would make the boundary run in a continuous straight line at this point. A small triangle at the intersection of Southern and Branch Avenues was transferred to the commission as part of the Fort Drive Parkway.

Thomas S. Seattle, secretary of the Commission, reported on the Reynolds bill to acquire vacant land in Arlington to double the size of the National Cemetery. He reported that the Commission had taken no action on the McCarran bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Police to the airport and other Government buildings on the Virginia shore.

Increase in Colds Laid to Less Heat

Many District residents who had colds this winter can choose between blaming the Axis or the OPA.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, told a House Appropriations subcommittee in hearings released yesterday that lowered temperatures in homes this winter had caused an increase in "respiratory infections" (colds to you), particularly among children and old people.

The Gentler Sex

As Women Plan The Peace

Never before have so many women throughout the world been so united as at present on a common goal—a lasting peace. Never before in any war have so many women leaders so far in advance of its end been thinking, studying, and working with the determination "This shall not happen again!"

What then have these women evolved? Have they anything in mind beside lofty platitudes and Utopian dreams? They have. This they proved in the speeches made at the recent observance of International Day in New York under the auspices of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women. Now the federation has issued summaries of these speeches together with the peace suggestions it has received by correspondence from foreign women leaders.

Peace Requisites Are Definite

The women quoted emphasize in general these points:

There must be definite planning ahead for the peace negotiations.

The people must be educated concerning the problems of the peace table or the negotiations will be futile.

Justice rather than vengeance must motivate settlements.

Economic competition between nations must give way to economic cooperation through trade treaties and lowered tariffs.

There can be no returning to the past. Plans for the future must look forward.

Reminiscent of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's appeal to Congress for a peace without vengeance or provincialism is the plea of Miss Pin Pin T'An for just treatment at the peace table. This Chinese woman leader, now engaged in shortwave broadcasting in this country, quotes Confucius as replying to the question, 'What do you think of repaying evil with kindness?" with the advice, "Repay kindness with kindness, but repay evil with justice."

Economic peace between nations was stressed by Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the federation, and also in the peace plan submitted by the Sydney Club of Australia. Answering the question, "How can freedom from want be attained?" Miss Phillips says:

"By a cooperative rather than a competitive attitude among nations and among classes; by a lowering of tariffs and strengthening of reciprocal trade agreements; by establishing a system in which there are jobs enough to go around, not spasmodically but normally, and a just recompense for work done; by an economic system geared to a production of plenty rather than production merely for profit."

The Sydney Club's peace plan includes the expansion of international trade by removal of economic barriers and the establishment of equality of trade conditions."

Both Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former United States Minister to Norway, and Mrs. Natalia Danesi Murray, formerly of Italy, now of the international division of the National Broadcasting Co., warned of the dangers of starting peace negotiations without definite plans and without education of the people. "We have the example of what happened in 1919 as a warning," says Mrs. Harriman. "Then we sat down at the peace table at Versailles armed with noble peace aims, but unsupported by the will of an informed people and their legislative representatives."

'Good Old Days' Out of the Picture

Mrs. Murray warns that the Italians and other Europeans in the underground movements will, at the end of the war, be in a state of "desperate eagerness and tension" and will need not only just treatment but guidance and a definite international policy to which they can adhere.

Miss Kathleen Courtney of England, women's organization leader, stresses the need of world organization backed by international law. The Sydney Club's peace plan includes a court of international justice, an international police force, and an international parliament.

Mrs. M. C. Chow, formerly a practicing attorney in Shanghai, pleads that there be no return to the "good old days." Modern China, she points out, has not known many "good old days" either in its national or international life, and what it wants now is a "living peace."

Mrs. Nila Magidoff, Russian journalist, pleads for "real friendship between all nations," and Mrs. Rulka Langer, Polish author, asks for "greater assurance of equality and brotherhood."

Throughout all the speeches and plans run two persistent warnings: "We must educate for peace," and "We must not go back." The foreign women particularly urge that the future be built on a "new pattern."

Favored for Washington Weather

By Jeanne Contini

The topper is THE new spring favorite. It is a true overcoat in the sense that it goes over everything with equal grace. It's comfortable, graceful, becoming and eminently desirable. The topper is suitable, especially for the Capital's spring and summer weather, when you need a coat early in the morning and in the evening but will be carrying it in the midday sun. It's a patriotic coat, too, as its brevity conserves fabric. We thought of so many reasons why this coat should be an excellent investment that we went out and bought one and have worn it every day for a solid week.

Pictured above is a topper that rates a high score in value . . . in a medium wale corduroy, a good summer weight. It is fully lined, has two deep pockets, and its color is butter-nut beige. This particular shade is seasonable all year around; not so light that it must travel often to the cleaner, but a warm rich neutral shade.

About $11 will buy it. For further information, please call National 4200, extension 324.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Bring your own lunch box. This is the bit of advice members of the Washington League of Women Shoppers will find tucked into the notice of the league's meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, 12:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, 1615 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, when Dr. Eveline M. Burns, chief of the economic security and health section, National Resources Planning Board, speaks on the "American Security Plan."

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

But lunch or no lunch, no doubt the league members and their friends will turn out in droves to hear Dr. Burns discuss the whys and wherefores of the American Security Plan, for which she has served as director of research during its formulation. In fact, she indexed the 5-pound book, "Security, Work and War Relief Policies," which caused quite a stir in Congress. Moreover, she wrote at least 4 pounds of the 450,000-word volume.

Often referred to as the "American Beveridge Plan," nothing infuriates Dr. Burns more than for her work to be so termed. Author of a number of books on social security and employment problems, she has been for many years a vice president of the American Association for Social Security and of the Consumers League of New York.

The handsome English-born woman came here from London School of Economics in 1926, taught at Columbia University and eventually ended up in Washington. Her husband, Arthur Burns, also English, born, is deputy chief of the Office of Civilian Supply at the War Production Board. Both are American citizens.

If interested in attending the league's meeting, telephone Mrs. Anita Sufrin, North 4501.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The ratio of one minute of exercise to every hour you sit to work will keep you in shape no matter how many hours you sit on the job, or whether you work on the assembly line or at a desk. If you sit for the regulation eight hours, take eight minutes of calisthenics a day.

It isn't the sitting that spreads the hipline. It's the fact that when you sit, you don't get exercise for the hip muscles. To keep the tone in these muscles you have to plan for exercise—and take it.

There are any number of hip slimmers. But if I were supervising your program there are three in particular I would give you because they get such excellent results and there is so little chance of doing them wrong.

We would start off with a leg-swing. Stand erect and in good posture, with one hand on chair at side for support. Swing one leg from the hip in a high forward kick, then up in back. If you bend forward with the backward swing, you can kick higher—and the higher you kick, the more you use your hip muscles. Continue for 25 counts, relax, and repeat with the other leg.

To make the leg-swing double as exercise for the abdominal girdle, pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles throughout.

If sitting has encouraged a little pad of fat to perch on the side and back of the hip, you can kick it off. Short, staccatic backward thrusts of the leg from the hip should do the trick. Place one hand on the pad and make sure that you are working the muscles underneath. Keep it up for 20 counts, shake the leg vigorously but loosely from the hip to dispel tension, and repeat with other leg.

Here is my favorite hip slimmer: Lie on the side on floor, head pillowed on arm, legs straight down. Swing the top leg up in front, then up and out in back. Just swing the top leg. Keep the under leg out of the action. Swing for 25 counts, flop over on your back and relax, then repeat with the other leg.

Finish with a roll. I like a straight roll. It's so easy on your back. Raise head and feet slightly off the floor and roll straight across the hips and over on one side, give yourself a push and roll back across and over on the other side. Keep rolling. This really is not as slimming as the other exercises but it has a nice, smoothing effect on the figure.

This workout is suggested especially for the girl who sits at her job. But it is just as effective for anyone who stands up to work. The only difference is that you should spend more time doing the floor exercises and a little less at leg swinging.

Australian Women Dry Own Vegetables

By Margaret Kernodle

Associated Press Staff Writer

"Soup's on" in Australia because housewives there dehydrated a lot of vegetables during the summer just ended, Mrs. Herbert Evatt, Iowa-born wife of the Australian Minister, reported today.

The dehydration, requiring about three days of drying, was carried out mostly at home, she told reporters in describing civilian wartime life "down under. The recipe is simple: The vegetables are cut fine, then placed in trays and left in a hot sun.

"Just a spoonful of the dried vegetables makes enough soup for a family," she said.

Even dried tomatoes are tasty. But moisture and heat make the drying time vary, she cautioned American women. Mrs. Evatt, who has just returned to this country, reported the only rationed foods are tea (three ounces a week) and sugar (a pound a week) but added that potatoes were scarce until the bountiful crops came in. Potato peelings with eyes were planted in victory gardens throughout the country.

American soldiers in Australia, she related, insisted on doughnuts and waffles and got 'em to such an extent that no waffle irons or percolators are left for private use.

Stores have abandoned night hours because of a lack of salespeople. Nobody has more than one domestic servant no matter how big his house is—it's a law. The American Minister's wife also gets along with just one.

Strict rationing of clothes allows 112 tickets twice a year and really cuts down on clothes, she said. A woman's suit requires 29 coupons, a man's 40, a woman's dress 13 (more for long sleeves), a man's shirt 24, and shoes, 8.

"It's popular," she laughed, "to say I've had this suit four seasons, this hat five years."

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER X

Dr. Cartier returned that evening. He came into the staff's mess hall while Ruth was at dinner. He sat beside her at the table and asked the corpsman waiter only for coffee.

"You look tired, Jean."

"I am tired," he said simply. "You need a long rest."

He gave her a fond smile. "That will come one day," he told her. "I think my tiredness is mostly a matter of carrying the weight of the world on my shoulders. I worry and I am afraid. I cannot be like you, Ruth—like all of you Americans."

"But we see the end of things, Jean—and the new beginning. It's so very clear. I wish I could let you see with my—with our eyes."

"Yes," he said.

Later, when she went off duty, they walked down to the beach. The sand was silvery in the moonlight and the surf churned against the shore in long restless ribbons of white lace. Across the water was home, and Ruth felt a tug at her heart. Some day she would be going home, and it would be a new beginning. Jean and she. . . . Abruptly a thought dulled the happy prospect.

She looked anxiously at him. "Jean, what are our plans? We have not talked about them. Do you think of the future?"

"Since meeting you, yes," he softly said. "If the world is ever right again, I know what our plans will be. We shall go to France, Ruth. I will make you happy there as you have made me happy here."

She whispered, "Yes, Jean," but she was secretly afraid. She did not want to go to France. She had never been away from home until coming to this island. She wasn't sure she liked strange places and strange people. She found Jean studying her face. He understood.

"Do not be afraid, Ruth. If we have our love, we shall be safe and happy."

"Of course," she replied, almost convinced. She halted as Jean touched her arm. She lifted her face as his arms went about her. With his lips against hers, everything seemed all right. And when he asked, "You are sure, dear? You are sure your love for me is strong enough?"

"Yes, Jean."

"You must never have regrets."

"I never shall."

He held her at arm's length and studied her face while the moonlight shone upon it. Her eyes glowed and her lips were parted in a half-formed smile.

"You are so beautiful, Ruth. I look at you and think my good fortune cannot be real. Your world is filled with men who know laughter and brave confidence. When I saw you with Captain Lowry the day I was called to treat Burke, I felt a wretched jealousy." His hands tightened on her arms. "Ruth, I must know. There is no man but me?"

"There is no one but you, Jean."

But now she was afraid. He spoke too often of Steve Lowry in connection with her; it was as though he knew about them without realizing he knew. This was the moment to tell him about Steve.

Then the moment was gone, for Jean was saying, "Once I thought I never would return to France, telling myself I would find some new land like South America or the United States. It seemed—"

"Jean, we shall! You'd be happy there!"

He shook his head. "You do not understand," he told her. "In my country I could hold you forever. In yours I would be—inadequate. Within myself, I mean. You would compare me with other men, you would see my shortcomings, and in the end you would stop loving me."

"It does no good to think that way, Jean."

"We must face the truth," he insisted.

She wanted to plead with him. She wanted him to know that she was sure of herself. She wanted to tell him that no man—not even Steve Lowry—could dull him in her eyes. But again she could not speak, and now someone was coming along the beach from the direction of the air base. A someone who was tall and wide-shouldered, who strode along with a confident jauntiness. Steve Lowry, of course.

"Nothing like a moonlight walk for romance," he said. "A tropic moon and a pretty girl. Dr. Cartier, I envy your good luck."

"I don't believe you are serious, Captain."

"Ah, but I am—more serious than you know."

Ruth broke in, "We were just going back to the hospital." She was uneasy. She never knew what Steve might say.

Steve said, "I happen to be here for another reason. The moonlight isn't much fun when you're alone. Tell me, Doctor, does your patient Burke strike you as an unusual man?"

"Very unusual," Dr. Cartier said. "He is a man of character, and a difficult patient. Why do you ask?"

"I'm just curious. He knows all the answers, but I have a feeling he knows them too well. The follow is prowling tonight. I sighted him close to the base—outside sentry lines, of course—and I tried to follow him. When I reached the beach, however, he had vanished."

Dr. Cartier said, "I think he is anxious to leave the island." His voice was oddly shaken; his eyes were troubled. Ruth looked from him to the Army pilot. Steve was puffing at his pipe, his manner quite casual, but the intent way he watched Dr. Cartier made Ruth uneasy. She knew that somehow Steve had found some connection between Burke and the doctor, something beyond the relationshp of doctor and patient.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When a child reaches the age when money and what can be done with it becomes meaningful to him, that is the time to give an allowance.

Ordinarily, in a city where small stores abound on every street and several of them must be passed on the way to school, the age for allowances may be as early as 5. It may be several years later before the country child or the child in a suburban neighborhood has much personal use for money.

In either situation, at 7 or so, when children can count and understand the use of small sums, it is advisable to give the allowance as an educational procedure. There is one way, and one way only, by which any individual can learn about the management of money and th. is by having it, using it and noting the results.

As with all other phases of education, one cannot learn all about money in one lesson, nor work magic with its management just because one is old enough for this to be necessary. The simplest method is to offer the child small sums, allow him to use them independently and discover what happens.

A Desperate Mother is learning the hard way that children who have come to desire money cannot be "disciplined" so as to knock this desire out of them. This boy is 8½ and is filching small sums from the parent's pocketbook.

"I have talked to him again and again and he promises not to do this," she writes, "but in a few days he does the same thing again. My husband thinks he should have his 'neck broken,' and now I really don't know what to do."

For some reason you are making it very easy for the child to get at your pocketbook. He is going to school and no douht the largest percentage of children have their own pocketbooks and their own spending money. Because he hasn't, all the promises won't prevent him getting some, too, if you make the getting easy enough.

Start your boy with an allowance which has some responsibilities attached, such as stamps to buy, or pencils for school, but some left over for pleasurable spending. Once he has developed a feeling for his own money and his own pocketbook, you can trust him with increasingly larger sums, increasing, meanwhile, the obligations attached to his allowance.

You've begun the training later than most, but it isn't too late to develop a sense of ownership that will make him more respectful of your money. Meanwhile, keep your pocketbook where he can't rifle.

Our leaflet, "Allowances for Children," may be had by sending a 3-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

It's About Time

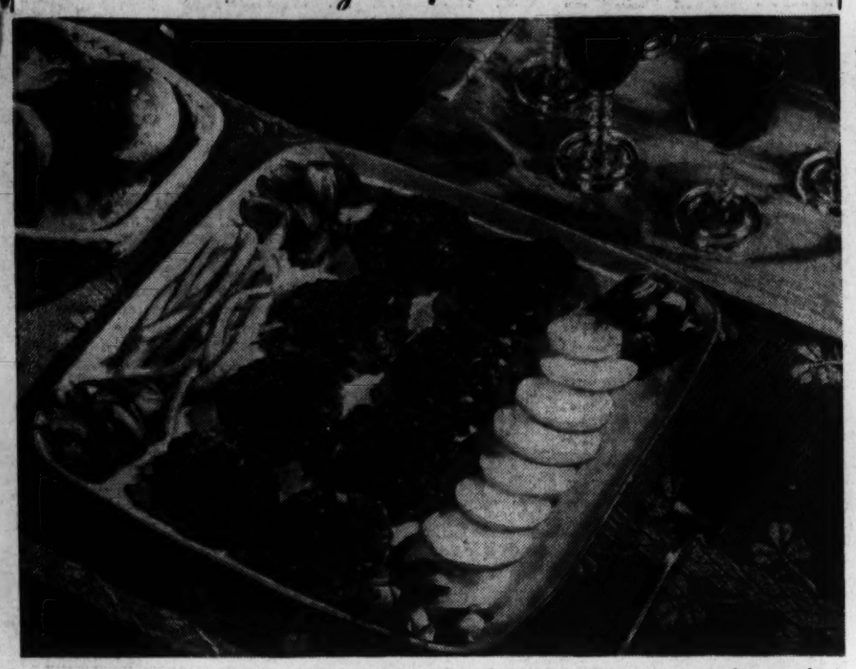
Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



Chopped meat when cooked with a skillful hand can be served for company on the best silver platter. Make up the hamburger with a bit of a flourish and serve with an air of sophistication.

Martha Ellyn

To give hamburgers sophistication, try including a measure of wine in their preparation. California Claret, Burgundy, Cabernet or any red table wine will turn the trick. A handful of mushrooms too can lift meat cakes to new recognition. Either make a sauce of the fresh mushrooms or broil the caps and serve them along with the burgers

Of course, hamburgers also call for large sweet onions. And many of the fresh vegetables like carrots, radishes, and pickled beets make grand accompaniments. For a truly festive touch, try serving glasses or red table wine—the same wine used in making the hamburgers.

Here's a suggestion for a Saturday night supper menu.

Saturday Supper Menu

Wine Hamburgers Onions
Toasted Buns
Carrot Sticks Radish Roses
Tossed Green Salad
Dutch Apple Pie Wine

Cooking with wine is as simple as the results are delicious. You just add the wine to suit your taste. It is easy on the pocketbook, too, for the fine wines grown in California are available at reasonable prices. Here's the way to use the wine in making the hamburgers:

WINE HAMBURGERS

Combine 1½ pounds ground beef with 1 chopped onion and 1 cup coarse cracker crumbs to which has been added 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Add 6 tablespons of wine—California Claret, Burgundy, Cabernet or any red table wine— and mix thoroughly. Form into patties and fry. When done, pour 4 tablespoons wine over the patties. Makes 8 cakes.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

Have you had your nose in a good book lately? And, if so, have you been shelling out 3 cents a day for the privilege? If you've been limiting yourself to the meager stock of the corner drug store and paying half the price of the book just for a "borry," then it's time you went over to the nearest public library and took a look around.

There are branches of the District of Columbia Public Library in every section of the city—could be one right across the alley, for all you know. For instance, there's the Anacostia branch, Chevy Chase branch, Georgetown, Mount Pleasant, Northeast, Southeast, Southwest, and so on. You just can't miss having one within easy commuting distance and once having discovered what these institutions have to offer, you'll be a frequent guest. Addresses are given in the telephone directory under "District of Columbia government—Public Library" — you can't lose.

Did you know that, in addition to the usual and unusual books, the public libraries sponsor programs of music and occasional lectures? You can accumulate schedules on your "investigation" visit which will tell you what's coming in the week or two ahead.

The Central Library, at Eighth and K Streets Northwest, holds several victrola concerts each month. Next one is scheduled for April 19—7:30 p. m. The Mount Pleasant branch has a victrola concert every Sunday at 5 p. m., and the Petworth and Southeastern brances do likewise at 4:30 each Sunday.

The Georgetown branch of the library is frequently coming forth with discussions on current topics and, as a further stimulus to our lagging culture, the Central Library has some pretty exciting exhibits of drawings and paintings from time to time. Currently there's an exhibit of Olin Dow's sketches which are well worth going to see.

If your chief interest in libraries is reserved for books (which is as it should be), you'll find a goodly assortment of new and old ones at any of the branches.

As a special help for those who are overcome at the sight of a card catalogue, the library mimeographs a monthly list of selected books (about 50 of the latest and best, classified by type), which gives a short synopsis of the work and the all-important classification number. So don't let the Dewey Decimal System Blues bother you!

Mail-Order Library

Something new in the way of service is now offered to Government workers who haven't time or energy to get to the libraries during the hours 9 to 9 on weekdays or 2 to 6 on Sundays. This is a mail-order sort of business. You simply deposit with the Central Library $1 postage money and a list of books you'd like to read. Then at intervals (which you determine) they mail the books to you, one by one. You can even send them back in the wrappings they arrive in. Very simple and, actually, much cheaper than lending-library fees.

If you want to spend a few happy hours with "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Volume 8," or some even more rare volume, and the Public Libary does not have it, without a doubt, you can find it at the Library of Congress. This institution (as you know, naturally) houses literally every book and periodical even known to man, and although you can't take 'em with you—unless you're a Senator or something — you can browse through them there to your heart's content. The reading rooms are probably more ideal for heavy reading than your roommate-infested boudoir, at that.

The Library of Congress has gained a name as a place of interest to sightseers; however, it has great practical value, as well as gingerbread decorations. For instance, if you've lost the address of your best friend in Sacramento, look through the telephone directory for that city (in the main reference room, along with a few hundred others), and find it right off. There are innumerable other publications of more than passing interest which can be used in the library and, incidentally, which can be found practically nowhere else. The library is open for business until 10 o'clock every night (Sunday hours are 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.) and thus we all can find time for our various researches after working hours.

You can probably find your home-town newspaper, too, whatever its circulation, if you go to the newspaper reading room. In fact, you can probably get out the issue of June 16, 1926, when your commencement was the big news.

It would probably take years to discover everything that's hidden away in the Library of Congress —but every trip is guaranteed to bring to light some source of information which will be valuable —even essential—some day.

So get the public library habit! You'll get an unbelievable lot for your carfare!

If you don't believe that advance guard of "S. O. Sawing away on a board that later went into a fence is Mrs. Paul Palmer of Pleasantville, N. Y., who was a Washington visitor last week. Directing the work is Baroness Stackelberg. To the left is King Farnsworth (First Class, Fire Control, U. S. N.) nailing away at a board. The "S. O. TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Mary Breckinridge, Founder of Nursing Service, Coming to D.C.

Will Introduce Cornelia Otis Skinner at Benefit Performance This Afternoon

When the annual benefit of the Washington Committee of the Frontier Nursing Service is held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel, Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, founder and director of the service, will be present. She will introduce Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, who will present six of her famous monologues at the program.

Mrs. Breckinridge, who arrived yesterday morning at the Hay-Adams House in the company of her secretary, Miss Winnie Saxon, became interested in the needs of mountaineers when, as a child, she was quarantined with her great-aunt's work in mountain schools. Having first-hand knowledge of the lack of elementary facilities for health protection in the remote regions, she then resolved to promote a health program in those districts where epidemics spread unchecked over large areas because hygiene and sanitation were unknown.

After having studied public health work in Columbia University and having been trained as a nurse in St. Luke's Hospital in New York, Mrs. Breckinridge went to England and remained abroad to make a study of the health program as it is carried out in the highlands of Scotland. Returning to this country, she made a survey of the Kentucky mountain region and three months later, in 1925, with the help of a local committee established a health center which has expanded from a five-room cabin, accommodating two nurses to an organization which now covers seven States.

Following Miss Skinner's presentation, there will be an informal reception. Mrs. Breckinridge will remain in Washington through Tuesday.

Mrs. Philip Bonsal, wife of the State Department's Chief of the Division of American Republics, is acting as chairman of the special program committee for the Russian exhibit month. She will have assisting her as hostesses during the coming Tuesday evening program Mrs. Jose T. Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the Adviser on International Economic Affairs of the State Department.

Mr. Wood's talk will enable guests at the exhibit to visualize conditions in Russia and other war zones through the eyes of one who has not only experienced bombings in Russia but who was in Paris when Hitler marched on Poland and was among the hundreds of thousands refugees machine-gunned on the roads out of Paris when the Germans marched into France. During a 10-year period he took an active part in assisting in the industrial development of Russia and traveled to virtually all parts of the country in his capacity as metallurgist and construction engineer. He was once a passenger on a Norwegian freighter which met and sank a German U-boat in the mid-Atlantic.

Like other Russian exhibit events, next Tuesday evening's program at 8:30 o'clock is open to the public free of charge at the 1218 Connecticut Avenue exhibit headquarters.

To accommodate Government workers and others who find it difficult to attend the exhibit during the daytime, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman, announces that the exhibit will be open tomorrow from 2 to 6 p. m. The closing time on weekdays during the rest of April will also be extended one hour, until 6 p. m.

Congressional Wife Is Former Newspaper Woman

IN THE CAPITAL SPOTLIGHT

Agnes B. Hale, Engaging Newcomer to Capital, Finds Our Town 'Difficult but Delightful'

Congressional Wife Is Widely Known Short Story Writer

By Martha Rhyne

Washington can thank its lucky stars for delightful newcomers. No exception is the wife of the "gentleman from Maine," Representative Robert Hale. All the usually ill-chosen adjectives—charming and refreshing—can be aptly and honestly applied to Agnes Burke Hale.

By no means the typical housewife—domesticity has been thrust upon her—she wears the responsibility of running a household with a part-time maid and the general confusion which wartime has brought upon the home with the same casual air that she drapes her beige suit coat over her narrow shoulders.

Harris & Ewing
MRS. ROBERT HALE

Has Master's In Sociology

Though she greets you with a warm, strong handclasp, she's so tiny you immediately feel that you want to protect her from life's tempetuous problems. It doesn't take long to learn that, thank you just the same, she's quite capable of taking care of herself.

Educated in her birthplace, Morristown, N. J., and at Barnard College in New York, where she was graduated with a major in history, she emerged no different from the average girl, very sociological. Enough ambition lasted to pull her through a master's degree in sociology and a year's work in the social endeavor of New York and Boston. But the newspaper urge caught up with her.

It was while she was doing reporting and feature writing on the New York Evening Sun during the last war that she had the patriotic desire to serve overseas. Efforts to get into Army publicity failed and dickering with the Red Cross outlasted the armistice, but in January of 1919 she did get into publicity work with the Y. M. C. A. and sailed for France. It was there that she met Mr. Hale.

When they were married in 1922 she went to Maine and there began writing fiction between her duties as wife, civic worker, and mother to daughter, Patricia.

Only One Story Finished Here

Being a politician's wife in the last few years has left her little time to write the short stories which she sold regularly to nationally known magazines. But she enjoys her new role. "You see," she said, "My husband is a good politician—not the hand-shaking variety—but nevertheless, a good politician."

Plans to Return Soon to Cottage On Maine Coast

Washington she finds difficult but delightful. She had the same housing problems which have become a familiar song from the lips of Capital newcomers. She long since gave up any ambition she had to learn the geography and calculate distances. Organized planing she abondoned for the much easier manner of letting knowledge grow on her with experience. Safely in the garage in Portland is parked the family car. The Hales, like average Washingtonians, ride the buses and marvel at their efficiency.

Having so much domestic responsibility, so little time alone that she has finished only one story since her arrival, has prompted her decision and whetted her desire to go back to Maine for the summer. There, in the Cushing Island cottage where Mr. Hale has spent his summers since childhood she'll raise a garden, enjoy the delightful climate and do some canning. (In weathering Washington's climate, she admits defeat.)

Likes Informal Social Life

She is enthusiastic about her husband's work—brightens at conversation regarding her daughter, a student at Madeira—thinks that wartime offers unbounded journalistic opportunities, but admits that too much time spent in the newspaper business is dangerous—is enthralled with Washington's informal social life where one never ceases meeting fascinating personalities.

Agnes Burke Hale is a newspaper reporter's delight when she starts firing away at "leads" for stories. But if you aren't careful, she'll "lead" you right around the bush and avoid the timely topic, her own story.

Beautiful Homes to Be Open On Georgetown Tour Today

This afternoon, from 2 to 7, the Old Georgetown House tour will continue today, and Mrs. Oliver McKee, jr., chairman, and Mrs. Macgill James, chairman of hostesses, have arranged for hostesses for the 15 houses to be open to the public this afternoon.

At Dumbarton Oaks, which was shown yesterday through the courtesy of Harvard University, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, its former owner, was one of the hostesses, showing guests around her old home, pointing out some of the rare tapestries and treasures which she and Mr. Bliss gathered from all parts of the world.

Of special interest is the recently done-over house of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Belin, whose garden adjoins famous Evermay, home of Mr. Belin's parents. Miss Rose Greely's small house on O Street is a gem, and the Sidney Mitchell house, which Helen Marye Thomas did over, is well worth an additional car token. It is listed for tomorrow's tour and is close to the houses of Representative and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth at 3263 N Street, and the equally lovely house of Representative and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth, just two doors away.

Mrs. Oliver McKee, jr., has arranged the two-day tour with an eye to gas rationing, houses being grouped in the same neighborhood, making it easy for visitors.

She carried a prayer book with a white orchid on the cover.

Mrs. Ann W. McGrath of Philadelphia, cousin of the bride, was her maid of honor. She wore an aqua gown fashioned like the bride's costume, her tulle crown matching the dress. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow daisies and sweetpeas.

FloydHamilton Found Hiding At Alcatraz

San Francisco, April 16.—Ten years ago he was a swaggering desperado, confident with a spitting pistol in his hand. Today they found him cringing in fear in a storeroom of Alcatraz Prison, his clothing in rags, his body lacerated from falls on the rocky island from which he tried to escape.

He was Floyd Hamilton, 36, one-time scourge of the Southwest in the days of the notorious Parker-Barrow-Hamilton gang of killers and robbers.

For four days Hamilton had hidden on grim Alcatraz after he and three others made a spectacular dash for freedom. Prison guards thought he had perished. Two of his companions had been captured, and one is listed as dead.

Hamilton was found beneath a pile of material in a storehouse. Cold, wet, hungry and covered with cuts from falls on the rocky shore, Hamilton last night crawled back to the building from a cave where he had hidden for two days, Warden James A. Johnston said. He was treated for exposure, exhaustion and lacerations.

Cave Was Refuge

The cave was the same refuge in which prison guards had found Fred Hunter, 34, a member of the Alvin Karpis gang and one of the quartet which participated in Tuesday's bid for freedom.

The other two were Harold Martin Brest, 31, bank robber and kidnapper from Pittsburgh, who was hauled from the waters of San Francisco Bay by a prison launch, and James A. Boarman, 24, Indianapolis bank robber, the only one of the four to make good his escape—in death.

Boarman was hit by a bullet from a tower guard and disappeared beneath the water after slipping from Brest's grasp.

Warden Johnston said Hamilton, whom prison authorities previously believed had drowned in the tide which swirls around the island prison in San Francisco Bay, "never got far from shore. When he got down to the water (in the attempted escape) he grabbed a plank. He said he discovered he couldn't make it and that when he heard shooting he climbed into the cave. He was there when we took Hunter, in a different part.

Found by Guard

"Last night he knew he couldn't get away and climbed out and up. A guard found him beneath the material in the storehouse today as the search continued for the implement used to force the window."

A decade ago Hamilton and his notorious partners in crime, the cigar-smoking gungirl, Bonnie Parker, and Clyde Barrow, among others, preyed on the Southwest. Bonnie and Barrow died, riddled with bullets, as they tried to run through a highway blockade while sought for murder.

Liquor Dealers Raise $7125, Ship 3 Million Smokes to Army

Washington's liquor dealers have bought and shipped to American soldiers at the front nearly three million cigarets, to be distributed without cost to the soldiers, it was learned yesterday.

To provide an organization for this work, the dealers several weeks ago formed the Wine, Liquor and Beverage Industry of Washington, D. C., Inc. This is a nonprofit corporation, formed only to collect funds for cigarets' and making sure they are delivered.

At a meeting this week, it was reported that $7125 had been collected, sufficient to purchase almost three million smokes. It was said this was the largest such fund yet collected in the United States. The largest previous being $6000 for two million cigarets.

Hogarth Colston is chairman of the corporation. Other officers are Harry Pascal and Leo Garner, vice chairman; Bernard C. Oser, and Charles D. Goldberg, secretaries, and Ben Rich, treasurer. Manuel J. Davis and Richard W. Galiher are general counsel.

Committees are: Wholesalers A. Colston, H. P. Brightmen, Isidore Forman, Pete McClosky and Dave Rubin; Wholesalers B, Edward Zupnick; Distillers, Clyde Butler, Jules Merson and James Spain; Retailers A, Ben Rich and Bernard C. War Sidelights

Japs on New Offensive, Tokyo Says

London, April 16 (AP).—The Tokyo radio declared tonight that Japan is now on the offensive and that heavier pressure is being exerted against New Guinea "and Australia itself."

"Circles close to the navy declare Japan now is on the offensive," the radio said in a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information. "Japanese army and navy air forces are striking swiftly with tremendous power against enemy positions and supply lines from the Indian-Burman border to New Guinea and the Solomons.

"Japanese triumphs at Milne Bay clearly show the newly reinforced air force of the enemy is unable to cope with Japanese air attacks on key positions. Japan's pressure on enemy forces in New Guinea as well as on Australia itself has become decidedly heavier."

Optical Superiority

Philadelphia, April 16 (AP).—The United States for the first time in history is superior to Germany in the manufacture of critical military optical instruments—range and height finders which largely determine whether a big gun will hit or miss, the Army's Frankford Arsenal announced today.

Col. John B. Rose, commanding officer, disclosed that Nazi equipment captured in North Africa and elsewhere has been studied by Army technicians and found in almost every case to be inferior to newly improved American products.

Italian Police Shake-up

London, April 16 (AP).—The Berlin radio reported today a shake-up in Italian police administration in which Dr. Carmine Senise, chief of Italian police forces, was replaced by Rendo Chierici, Blackshirt leader, and diplomatic quarters here were quick to trace the action to increasing German influence in Italy.

Chierici formerly was deputy commander of the Fascist organization in Tripolitania and lately has commanded a special branch of the Fascist militia. The assistant police chief also was replaced and new prefects were named for the important posts of Messina, Sicily, and the naval base of Taranto, the Berlin broadcast said.

The prefect of Messina replaced the war production diretcor, it was reported.

Services Commemorating Palm Sunday Planned by Washington and Nearby Churches

Music, Pageantry to Mark Traditional Observances Here

Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem over a palm-strewn path almost 2000 years ago will be commemorated tomorrow with traditional Palm Sunday music and pageantry in local and nearby churches.

Among the highlights will be a pageant at historic Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, at 8 p. m., produced and directed by Dr. Augustine Smith of Boston University with a cast of 75.

Entitled "The Christus," the pageant will be in five scenes—"The Old Testament Prophecy of Better Days," "The Christ Triumphant," "The Christ of Tragedy," "The Christ of the Resurrection and a Warless World," and "The Christ of All Peoples."

There will be two identical Palm Sunday services at 9:30 and 11 a. m. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris is pastor; Glenn Carow, organist, and Justin Lawrie, choirmaster.

Washington Cathedral

Palm Sunday will be observed in Washington Cathedral with five services, including celebration of Holy Communion at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., morning prayer at 11 a. m., evensong at 4 p. m., and a special Lenten service in the crossing of the cathedral at 8 p. m.

The Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, canon chancellor, will preach at 11 a. m. service in which the traditional palms will be carried in procession by the choir and clergy. The Rev. Dr. Robert O. Kevin, professor of Old Testament language and literature at Virginia Theological Seminary, will preach at 4 p. m., fourth member of the seminary faculty to preach in the cathedral on Sunday afternoons during Lent. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia Divinity School, Dr. Kevin was formerly rector at Kirkwood, Mo.

A special program of Palm Sunday music will be sung at both services by the cathedral choir of men and boys, under the direction of Ellis C. Varley, acting organist and choirmaster.

The evening service will be the last in the current series of Lenten services featuring congregational singing led by the Cathedral Choral Society and students of the National Cathedral School for Girls. The Rev. W. Curtis Draper, jr., acting canon precentor, will be the speaker.

At National Shrine

With Sulpician priests of the Theological College of Catholic University officiating, assisted by seminarians of the college, Holy Week services will be held in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the university campus beginning with the blessing of the palms and a high mass at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Tenebrae, commemorating the sufferings and death of Christ, will be sung on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock, with the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the shrine, as the celebrant. Holy hour will follow at 4 o'clock. Mass of the Pre-Sanctified is scheduled for 12 noon on Good Friday. The services on Holy Saturday will begin at 6:30 a. m. with the mass at approximately 8 o'clock. Easter Sunday services at the shrine will include low masses at 8, 10 and 11 o'clock, with sermons at each by Father Rielly.

Howard University

Dean Howard Thurman announced today that the Howard University Glee Club and Choir, under the direction of Warner Lawson, will be presented in a special Palm Sunday service of song. Some of the selections to be rendered will be two spirituals, "The Crucifixion" and "Were You There?;" chorale, "Oh, Sacred Head Now Wounded," "The Crucifixus" from B Minor Mass by Bach, "The Palms," "I Will Extol Thee O Lord" by Kerr and, "Alleliua" by Randall Thompson. The glee club and choir are made up almost entirely of students. The service will be at 6:30 p. m. in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University. The public is invited.

Churches Plan Observance of Good Friday

Good Friday — commemorating Christ's hours of agony on the Cross—will be solemnly commemorated in the Nation's Capital in the coming week.

Hundreds of services of an individual, community and city-wide nature are being planned, and many business firms will allow employes recess from 1 to 3 p. m. to attend services.

The Committee for the Three Hours' Observance of Good Friday, of which Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry Methodist pastor and Senate chaplain, is general chairman, is urging everyone to spend all or part of his time at services during the sacred three hours, and to complete Easter shopping before Good Friday.

The Southeast Interchurch Council will sponsor services Good Friday from 12 to 3 p. m. at the Washington City Church of the Brethren.

A three-hours service will be held Good Friday, beginning at 7:30 p. m., at St. Aloysius' Catholic Church, North Capitol and I Streets, with a sermon by the Rev. Ferdinand C. Wheeler, S. J., vice president of Scranton University.

Curtis Draper jr., acting canon precentor, as celebrant; three hours meditation beginning at 12 noon, conducted by the Rev. Merritt F. Williams, canon almoner of the cathedral and Navy chaplain, and evening prayer at 4 o'clock.

United Youth Easter Rally Will Feature 2 Broadcasts

Preparation for the first annual United Youth Rally to be held at Constitution Hall on Easter at 3 p. m., is now completed, and will feature a popular broadcast over two radio networks.

Percy Crawford's Young People's Church of the Air, broadcast by the Mutual network, will highlight the program. His famous quartet of singers, and other Christian youth leaders will participate in the broadcast.

A chorus of 65 "boys in blue" from the U. S. Navy School of Music will render special Easter music. The chorus is directed by Marvin Maher.

John Miller, director of Life in Christ Fellowship, will conduct a 15-minute "youthspiration" testimonial period.

The rally will be presided over by Representative Marion Bennett of Missouri, youngest member of Congress.

The rally is under the sponsorship of the United Youth Committee (interdenominational), George H. Kendall, chairman.

'Le Chemin Difficile' French Service Subject

"Le Chemin Difficile" will be the subject of the sermon by the Rev. Andre F. Liotard at the French service at St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow at 4 p. m. On Good Friday at 6:15 p. m. Mr. Liotard will hold a special service in French.

'Stabat Mater' To Be Sung At St. Peter's

The celebrated and beautiful "Stabat Mater" of Rossini will be presented by St. Peter's Choir, Palm Sunday at 8:15 p. m. at St. Peter's Church, Second and C Streets Southeast. The choir is remembered for the fine artistry of its renditions in the past. For the "Stabat Mater" a promising array of talent has been organized. As the performance of Rossini's work offers technical difficulties, the scheduled rendition will interest some from a critical viewpoint. But nearly everyone is familiar with one or more of its fervent and soul-stirring melodies which find a place on many concert programs.

The "Stabat Mater" is a Latin hymn of 10 double stanzas of 6 lines each. Its beauty and form in the original Latin are unsurpassed, inciting many attempts at translation. The theme is pictured in the opening line: "Stabat Mater Dolorosa"—there stood the mother (of Jesus) grieving (at the foot of the cross). The hymn has been inserted into the mass of the feast of the Seven Sorrows of Our Lady, which occurs on the Friday before Good Friday and hence has an official character in Catholic liturgy. It is also sung at the devotional exercise of the Way of the Cross.

Authorship of the hymn has been ascribed to Jacobus de Benedictis, about 1300 A. D., as he included it in a compilation of hymns at that time. But many scholars disagree with this assumption and place the authorship much earlier, some as far back as Pope Gregory the Great, 604 A. D. At best we can assume that its history is very old and that it represents the devotional outpouring of a great artist of the far distant past.

Cantata Is Featured

A dinner will be given tomorrow at 5 p. m. at Fifth Baptist Church, E near Seventh Street, honoring men in the armed forces. Dubois' cantata, "The Seven Last Words," will be rendered by the choir at 8 p. m. and broadcast over WWDC.

Faith Lutheran Rites

Holy Week services at Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, will include Holy Communion, Maundy Thursday, 8 p. m., and special music Good Friday at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Robert W. Long will speak on "The Challenge of the Incomplete."

Church Shows 'King of Kings' Films for Week

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, minister, preaches tomorrow at 11 a. m. at First Congregational Church on the theme "They Faced Life's Greatest Chance." Following a traditional custom in First Church, the entire congregation will unite in singing Faure's "The Palms." Appropriate decorations will be another feature, while the A Cappella Choir of 50 voices and Dorothy Wilson Halbach, contralto, will sing several festival selections.

Cecil B. DeMille's "King of Kings" the cinematic portrayal of the life of Christ, will be shown three times, admission free, on Palm Sunday, the hours being 3, 5:30 and 8 p. m. This 2 hour picture now comes with sound and musical accompaniment. This presentation is part of a national program to show the film simultaneously during Holy Week in 50 or 60 cities across the Nation.

Further showings of the film will be given every night next week (except Saturday) at 8 p. m. On Good Friday there will be three additional showings: at 10 a. m., 12:15 noon and 3 p. m. A silver offering is taken at each showing to support the venture; there is no admission charge.

Baptist Singers To Aid Glee Club

Thirty-five young women of the Calvary Baptist choir will augment the men's glee club of Fort Belvoir in presenting a Holy Week concert Tuesday evening at the fort. Corporal R. Monroe Harris and Herbert V. Pate will be conductors. Soloists will be James Berry, Miss Dorothy Geer and Miss Shirley Cain, of Calvary's choir.

Crammer, Church Youth Head, Enlists

Robert R. Crammer, president of the District Senior Christian Endeavor Union and chairman of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth, has answered the call to the colors.

CRAMMER

Crammer, for eight years one of the city's most active youth leaders, was inducted into the Marines last Monday and will leave the latter part of this month for basic training at Parris Island, South Carolina.

"Bob," as he is familiarly known, is a member of Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth and Maryland Avenue Northeast. He and his wife live at 18 Ninth Street Northeast.

Miss Beryl Brannon, of Memorial United Brethren Church has been elected as Endeavor Union president to serve the balance of the unexpired term until July 1, 1943. The Federation of Christian Youth is the young people's unit of the Washington Federation of Churches, representing more than 170 Protestant churches and allied agencies.

Communion Service

Dr. Seth R. Brooks of Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest, will conduct a Communion service on Thursday at 8 p. m. in observance of Holy Thursday. H. Jerome Graham will offer an organ meditation, "Bible Poems," by Weinberger, before the service.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This noted woman hymn writer never sat down deliberately to write a hymn. She waited till her inspiration came, and then wherever she was jotted down her thoughts. Though she was never physically strong, she was gifted and beautiful, and every hymn is full of her great spiritual strength and loveliness.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Former Chamber Head In Tax Troubles

THOMAS J. Watson, irrepressible head of International Business Machines, who has received more foreign decorations than almost any man in America, has got himself into income tax troubles. The Treasury has demanded that he pay up around $350,000 for 1937 under circumstances which affect not only Watson's pocketbook, but thousands of United States merchant seamen.

Watson waited until just a few hours before the deadline, then filed a petition with the Treasury contesting its tax claims.

Watson's tax difficulties arose while he was president of the International Chamber of Commerce in 1937 and was out of the country for what he contended was more than half a year. He spent a lot of his time abroad on Chamber of Commerce matters and on what he told his stockholders were efforts to sell business machines in Europe. Among other things, incidentally, he received a medal from Adolf Hitler, which he later asked Secretary Hull to return.

When the year 1937 was over, Watson reported to the Treasury that he had been absent from the U. S. A. six months plus a few hours over. He had it all figured down to the last minute. Under Treasury ruling 116-A, a man who has been absent for more than six months gets a substantial tax reduction.

However, when Internal Revenue experts began to probe closely into Watson's operations they discovered some interesting things. In May and June, 1937, he took six trips out of the United States, carefully estimating the exact number of hours he was away.

Signed Minutes

THEN, AFTER some travel in Europe, he came back to the United States. But in December, 1937, just as the tax year was about to close, he reported he went to Canada again.

However, when long-nosed Hugh McQuillen, New York's chief Internal Revenue investigator, began to pry into the matter, he found that Watson had signed the minutes of the directors' meeting of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, held at the very same time Watson said he was in Canada.

As a result, the Treasury is now collecting for the supposed absence of six months.

Another result is that the Treasury has now changed ruling 116-A, so that in order to get a deduction for six months' absence, a taxpayer must be out of the country six months consecutively. He cannot commute back and forth a few days in Mexico and Canada and add them all together.

This revised ruling has chiefly hit several thousand seamen, who in peacetimes escaped paying income taxes by working from New York to Galveston or to Los Angeles so many trips that it added up to a total of six months.

NOTE: Though Charles Bedaux generally got credit for inviting the Duke of Windsor to the United States several years ago, he is understood to have acted on behalf of Thomas Watson.

Capital Chaff

AMBASSADOR John Winant's younger brother, Fred, is the American representative in the Middle East Supply Center in Cairo . . . There is a shortage of planes for transporting officials to Africa. Some men cool their heels for a month before getting a seat . . . When Jimmy Byrnes heard that two Senate committees were arguing over which should go to Nor Africa, he said, "Isn't that another argument for two fronts?" . . . Now that power has shifted from Nelson to Wilson in the War Production Board, Sidney Weinberg is making himself indispensable to Wilson . . . Nelson is already engrossed in the problem of postwar reconversion . . . Keep your eye on Representative Lane Powers of New Jersey as a compromise possibility in the New Jersey G. O. P. gubernatorial convention . . . Powers is friendly with all G. O. P. factions and his supporters believe he would make a potent candidate for Governor against the demoralized Hague machine.

Gentle Ambassador

GAUNT, suave Billy Phillips, President Roosevelt's Ambassador to India, has now made an extensive tour of that country and is reported to be about ready to report to his chief on the vital but ticklish question of India's future.

Ambassador Phillips is an old Harvard friend of the President's and married one of F. D. R.'s boyhood chums, Caroline Astor Drayton. She and the President at the age of 10 used to publish a magazine together, with a daffodil painted on the cover, which they sold to their families for 10 cents.

Phillips is one of the most likable men in the diplomatic service, has served as Ambassador to Italy, Belgium, Minister to Canada, Holland, and as Undersecretary of State.

More likable than astute, Phillips is now reported to have finished his Indian survey without interviewing the leaders who have fought, worked and are now jailed for Indian independence. He has talked to Lord Linlithgow, the Viceroy, whose Oxford accent he understands. He has talked with General Wavell. And he has interviewed many businessmen in Bombay and Calcutta, all pillars of the British Raj.

These men, however, no more represent India than did the British Governor of Massachusetts at the time of the Boston Tea Party.

Meanwhile, Phillips has either made no effort to see, or at least has not seen, the men who really sway India's 300 million people Ghandi, Pandit Nehru or President Azad of the Indian National Congress. They are in jail, and technically Phillips can give the excuse that he is not permitted to see them. However, the Ambassador of the President of the United States certainly could see anyone in India if he really tried. Or failing that, Prime Minister Churchill certainly would listen to a request from his friend, President Roosevelt, that Phillips be permitted to see the real leaders of India.

When forthright former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson went to India, he conferred for hours with Gandhi, Nehru and all colors of Indian leadership. But it looks as if gentle Billy Phillips would come back only with the tea-table views of Lord Linlithgow.
